DAKOTA DAN GIVES OWN STORY OF LEAVING HOME

Dakota Dan, who is fighting to show he is Daniel Blake Russell and entitled to half of the half-million dollar estate left by the late Daniel Russell of Melrose, has told his life story to the AMERICAN. The first instalment of it is presented today.

This is the first time Dakota Dan's story has been told in connected and consecutive form. It is the story of a young man who says he left Melrose when he was twenty-three years old, drifted out into the Northwest, worked at various things from logging to lumber-shoeing and finally accumulated a fortune of something like $25,000 as a ranchman.

TELLS HOW HE LEFT HOME.

Then he heard, through a relative by marriage, of the death of Daniel Russell of Melrose and decided to come home, he says, and look into the estate that was left. In the story he tells of the reception he received when he went to Melrose, the fight he has made and is going to make and comments on the conduct of William C. Russell, whom he claims as a brother.

In the opening chapter of his story Dakota Dan relates with some detail the cause of his leaving home. He tells of his good-bye to his mother and recalls the last words he and his father spoke to each other.

Coming as it does at a time when another man, known as Fresno Dan, is on the stand before Master Pevey in the East Cambridge Court reiterating under oath that he is the real Daniel Blake Russell, Dakota Dan's story should elicit keen interest.

The opening chapter of the story follows:

By DAKOTA DAN.

CHAPTER I.

My name is Daniel Blake Russell. I was born in Melrose on January 3, 1862. I remained in Melrose until the

FRESNO LAWYER STICKS BY DAN

George W. Cartwright, at his home in Fresno, Cal., has issued a statement defending his receiving $40,000 for his services in bringing Fresno Dan Russell to Boston and of his accepting the case for a fee based upon the identifying of Fresno Dan as the long-missing Daniel Blake Russell. Mr. Cartwright declares that he is confident that Fresno Dan is the Daniel Blake Russell.

"Daniel Blake Russell's published statement of my contract with him is practically correct. I have received $5000 instead of $2,000. However, part of this was paid to my associate counsel in Boston.

Convinced of Identity.

"After my second interview with 'Fresno Dan,' I became convinced of his identity as the missing heir to the Russell estate. We attempted to correspond with William C. Russell and his counsel, but our communications were all ignored. We expected to be opposed by William C. Russell and his attorneys, and I persuaded 'Dan' that he could best protect his interests by making an appearance in the case.

"'Dan' was not 'broke,' neither was he a 'hobo,' but he was a working man, with only a few dollars, and I, therefore, took the case on a contingent fee, and entered into the form of contract usually employed in California by attorneys in taking contingent cases.

Arrival in Boston.

"Upon arriving in Boston I presented my client to William C. Russell's attorneys, and after a grilling examination in the presence of William C. Russell and other relatives, he was pronounced the missing heir.

"'Fresno Dan' is the missing heir of this there can be no doubt. My associates in Boston was so confident of success in the present hearing that my presence in Boston was not deemed necessary, and he so stated in letters and telegrams.

"Any one who knows William C. Russell, or who knows 'Fresno Dan' knows that it is not in them to play the part of impostors and deceivers."

COMPANY WOULD ENJOIN PICKETING

Judge Pierce of the Suffolk Superior Court issued an order of notice in a suit brought by Marks Schneider and David Schneider, proprietors of the Columbia Skirt Manufacturing Company, at No. 630 Washington street, Boston. They asked for an injunction to restrain Mike Ginsburg, Sam Levine, Joe Yibro, Harry Forman, Mike Davis and Hyman Cohn, whom they discharged on July 9, from standing about the premises and acting as pickets. The order of notice is returnable July 23.

ANOTHER REVOLT STIRS PORTUGAL

MADRID, July 20.—Another revolution against the Portuguese Republican government has broken out in the cities of Lisbon and Oporto, according to a dispatch received here today from Orenz. Government officials are said to be implicated in the two uprisings.

FREES MAN WHO HIT CONDUCTOR

In the South Boston Municipal Court Judge Fallon discharged James P. Horgan, twenty-five years old, of No. 497 East Eighth street, South Boston, charged with assault and battery on a strike-breaking conductor of the Boston Elevated on the night of July 17.

Horgan admitted his guilt. James A. Murphy, the conductor, put in evidence Murphy struck him first, splitting his lip. Horgan's testimony was corroborated by three witnesses, two of whom never saw him before.

What Judge Said.

In discharging Horgan, Judge Fallon said:

"The evidence in this case is that a conductor collecting a fare on the running board of his car got into an altercation with this passenger, Horgan, who remonstrated with him because he guided him. I realize the work of a conductor is hard, especially on a crowded open car, and the passenger may have considered him rough and spoke to him of the way he acted, which, of course, he had a right to do.

According to the testimony of Horgan and three respectable and seemingly impartial witnesses, the conductor was the aggressor. Under the conditions where three men testify that Murphy was the aggressor, if I am to believe these witnesses, and I certainly do, I must find for the defendant. I find him not guilty of assault and battery and I order his discharge."

Car Crew Arraigned.

Oscar Rofuse, a twenty-two-pound electrified conductor, and James S. Peterson, thirty-two, a motorman, were arraigned today charged with assault and battery on Dominico Vassallo, No. 76 Chevedor street, a South End tailor.

The two men give the address of No. 255 Northampton street, but are said to be strike-breakers from Philadelphia. They were taken from the Lenox street car barn by Patrolman Jeremiah J. Maloney.

Vassallo claims he was knocked down and then dragged from the car at the corner of Hanover and Battery streets, just before noon Thursday. The warrant was secured by his attorney, Everett W. Crawford, No. 45 Tremont street, and he has several witnesses said to be willing to confirm Vassallo's story.

Mr. Vassallo picked up a pocketbook on Tremont near Dover street, supposedly dropped by a passenger from a Roxbury Crossing-Hanover street electric inward bound, but the passenger not claiming it, Vassallo passed it to the motorman with the request that the latter hand it to the conductor. The motorman, however, is alleged to have thrust it into his pocket. When Vassallo remonstrated, he says, he was set upon, not only by the motorman, but also by the conductor on the present, so Vassallo claims, that he had not paid his fare.

Mr. Vassallo is a man of nearly fifty years, a tailor of the South End.

BELMONT MAY REVIVE NEWPORT COACHING

NEWPORT, R. I., July 20.—With the arrival of August Belmont, who is at his villa, Hyde-Se-Lac, there is hope that the sport of coaching may be revived and that there will be a coaching parade during the Summer. Mr. Belmont has ordered to be put in trim the coach formerly driven by his father, the late August Belmont, and not only does he intend to top it but he will as far as possible use the horses in preference to the automobile.

Woman Hurls Bag of Flour at Asquith, but Misses Premier

DUBLIN, July 20.—Another attack was made on Premier Asquith here today by a suffragette. The woman hurled a paper bag of flour at the statesman, but the missile missed its mark and burst, powdering men and women nearby. The woman was arrested and hurried away by the police, who feared the people would harm her. There is a feeling of deep resentment here against suffrage violence because of the esteem in which the Premier is held for his home rule fight.

DEMOCRATS HAD $619,410 IN 1908, RIDDER TESTIFIES

WASHINGTON, July 20.—By contributing $10,000 himself, and permitting each of his three sons to contribute $20,000, Herman Ridder, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee of 1908, evaded the Bryan dictum against contributions of more than $10,000.

Ridder today appeared before the Senate sub-committee investigating campaign expenses. He produced detailed records of the 1908 campaign not only for New York State as required by law, but for the entire United States, showing the war chest that year contained $620,644.72. Before the campaign was over $619,410.05 was spent.

ANNISQUAM DRAMATICS.

The Annisquam Dramatic Club will repeat the Winter performance of "As You Like It" at Village Hall, Annisquam, on the evenings of July 25 and 26. The proceeds will be devoted to the Village Hall Association. Miss Virginia Tanner will be in charge.

LEARN NAMES IN ROSENTHAL CASE

NEW YORK, July 20.—A complete confession has been made by one of the men suspected of assassinating Herman Rosenthal, the wealthy gambler.

Attaches of the District Attorney's office predicted today that within twenty-four hours the men who rode in the murder automobile and the man who did the actual killing would be arrested. This prediction was confirmed by Assemblyman Aaron J. Levy, attorney for Shapiro and Libby, owners of the machine in which the assassins escaped.

Reveals All Names.

He said: "The District Attorney has been given all the names and when the facts come out it will be the biggest police scandal that New York, or any other city in the world ever had."

Levy arranged a conference at which his two clients agreed to turn States evidence. They told all the facts in their possession, but the admissions made by Shapiro were the most important. It was on his confession that the prohibition of arrests was made.

Six letters containing threats of death have been received by Mr. Whitman through the mails. Most of them were addressed to the Whitman home, No. 27 Madison avenue, although some of them were sent to the District Attorney's office. While some of the communications were signed, the names attached to them are thought to be fictitious. The rest were unsigned.

Threats for Whitman.

They warned the official that he must relax his zeal in the Rosenthal case or suffer penalty.

Mr. Whitman was not alarmed by the threats, but he departed from his usual habit of throwing such letters away. The present letters were saved and may be used as evidence.

Three of the letters promise the District Attorney that "he will meet the same fate as Rosenthal" if he persists in his energetic course of action.

The fourth threatens suit to Mr. Levy, who is counsel for Louis Libby and William Shapiro, owners of the automobile from which Rosenthal was assassinated, evidently resulted from disclosures of the two men relative to the persons in the motor car on the night of the murder.

"Go Armed," Says Letter.

In addition to the forty-eight letters to Mr. Levy there was one of warning.

"I am a friend," said the writer of this communication, "and I warn you that you had better go armed."

Out of a fog of rumors and counter rumors as to the progress of the investigation into the assassination of the gambler there stands one salient fact.

Knows Them All.

Whether for good or evil, the police department of New York and the denizens of the so-called "underworld," are on terms of the utmost intimacy.

This has been demonstrated again and again during the investigation. There was no police "frame-up" and its possible connection with the murder.

Lieutenant Sam Paul almost strolled into police headquarters and talked things over.

District Attorney Whitman wanted to

With three games out of four won, the Red Sox started after the last of the series with the White Sox this afternoon before one of the greatest crowds of the season. Judging by the way that the crowd started it was believed that 20,000 would see the game.

Jimmy Callahan intended to use "Big Ed" Walsh, while Jake Stahl had Joe Wood and "Buck" O'Brien in the pink of condition to work, with a possibility of calling on Charley Hall, if he is fit.

MAYOR TAKEN SEVERELY ILL

Mayor Fitzgerald had a severe attack of the stomach trouble with which he has been afflicted since his return from Baltimore, at Young's Hotel today.

Dr. William J. Gallivan of the Board of Health, who was summoned, is unable to state whether the Mayor is suffering from ptomaine poisoning or a malarial disorder. The Mayor was in acute pain for some time, but after being relieved by his physician he refused to remain in bed and went to his office at City Hall.

The Mayor has been advised to take an extended rest with his family at his summer home in Falmouth and he will probably accept the advice. He left for Falmouth this afternoon.

Before he departed the Mayor had a long conference with Secretary Henry Abrahams of the Boston Central Labor Union. He learned definitely that the report a Fine State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation will not be made public until next week.

Mr. Abrahams assured the Mayor that as far as he knew, it was the intention of the committee to carry out fully the agreement made between him and the committee some weeks ago, that nothing would be done in regard to the general strike situation until after the State Board of Arbitration had reported. The Mayor commended the stand taken by the labor leaders in Boston.

"All through the controversy," he said, "the leaders of the Central Labor Union have acted with dignity and at the same time with persistency, and I think that all the citizens of Boston have reason to be proud of the manner in which the affairs of the Central Labor Union are conducted."

Walsh pitched his best game this season against the Red Sox Wednesday, when they made but two hits—one of them a scratch—and scored no runs. But "Buck" O'Brien pitched almost as well, and it was not until two were out in the ninth inning that the White Sox scored the only run of the game.

After Walsh's Scalp.

The Bostonians have beaten Walsh oftener than he has vanquished them this season, and fighting as they have throughout the Detroit and Chicago series, they rounded on winning today and making it four out of five, as they did in the Detroit games. In any case, the crowd was sure of a battle worth going to see.

As a preliminary to today's struggle, the Red Sox picked up two more games yesterday before a crowd of more than 18,000.

"The Hearst newspapers printed the true facts about the alleged cruelties to Italian soldiers, and helped allay the false or distorted rumors spread abroad concerning the cruel treatment of Turkish prisoners."

DENY SINKING OF ITALIAN WARSHIPS

ROME, July 20. Contradiction of the Turkish report that two Italian torpedo boats had been sunk while trying to run the Dardanelles was made here today in a message from Admiral Viale, the Italian fleet in the Aegean Sea. Wireless messages from Admiral Viale state that all the Italian warships are safe.

STRIKERS PLAN NEW EVIDENCE

Elated at their partial victory in persuading District-Attorney Pelletier to present to the Grand Jury their charges against certain Elevated officials, the strike leaders and their attorney, James H. Vahey, today were busy preparing further evidence to sup.? their allegations.

The most startling evidence, it is stated, will consist in the stories of certain men, who appeared before the District-Attorney, to the effect that Elevated officials plainly told them they were discharged for union activities.

The strikers make two charges. They allege that certain division superintendents committed perjury before the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, by denying that they had discharged men for union activities. This question—the reasons for their discharge—the men claim was the crux of the investigation. Therefore they assert the superintendents misstated material facts under oath and so committed perjury.

Charge Discrimination.

The other charge is that the officials violated Section 12, Chapter 106 of the Statutes, which deals with the question of discrimination against union men.

It was also asserted before the district attorney that a conspiracy existed to bring vicious men to the city, incite riots and so cast disfavor upon the union. The evidence on this point was to follow, however, that the district attorney is not expected to act upon it and only the first two charges will be presented to the Grand Jury when it is called in special session Tuesday.

Mr. Pelletier heard the stories of some hundred street car men. In addition, he and Mr. Vahey carefully examined the records of the hearing before the State Board and his announcement that the Grand Jury would be called followed.

Barry Asks Conference.

Mayor Barry of Cambridge has sent to General Bancroft of the Elevated a letter, enclosing an order of the City Council, requesting the Mayor to confer with Mr. Bancroft with a view to ending the strike. Mayor Barry declared his willingness to take part in such a conference.

J. P. Morgan's Shave Will Cost 15 Cents at Lenox This Year

LENOX, Mass., July 20.—Predatory plutocrats, millionaires, near-millionaires, diplomats and near-diplomats, who largely comprise the Summer colony here, are all laying odds today on whether the high cost of living won't force J. Pierpont Morgan into growing a beard now that Dr. Cos—surely you know Ducos—has raised the price of a shave in his local barber shop from ten to fifteen cents.

Dr. Dacos has been saving diplomats and millionaires, persons like Joseph H. Choate and George Westinghouse, for the last thirty years. The high cost of living might skyrocket, but Dacos was confident he could let it go at 10 cents a shave till today. This morning he boosted the price to 15 cents.

No kicks have yet been registered, but Mr. Morgan is due at the shop tomorrow and his will known tendency to resist any increase on his dividend may provoke a protest.

TWO STRANGELY DEAD FROM FUMES

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 20.—Two firemen are dead and five others ill as a result of being overcome by poisonous celluloid fumes while fighting a slight fire in the Callender block last Thursday night. Peculiarly enough, the men did not seem to feel the effects at first, but went to their homes, apparently all right, after being revived. Then later they became sick and Hoseman Edward J. L. Hogan and Fred Mac Affrey of Hook and Ladder No. 1 died at the Rhode Island Hospital.

Captain James M. Curtis, Hoseman George B. Borden, Hoseman Alexander M. McKay and Laddermen William J. Mannion and James J. Dorsey of Hook and Ladder No. 1 are still ill, but will recover.

The blaze was in the plant of the Majestic Manufacturing Company and celluloid stored there threw off a dense smoke.

Bass Edits Sunday American

Leader of N. H. Progressives

GOVERNOR ROBERT P. BASS OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Up at Manchester today the New Hampshire followers of Theodore Roosevelt are trying to decide how far they want to "follow the leader."

Among these New Hampshire friends of Colonel Roosevelt is the progressive young Governor, Robert Perkins Bass of Peterborough, a statesman of particular interest to readers of the AMERICAN today because he will be editor of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Governor Bass is not yet thirty-nine years old. He is believed to be a millionaire. A graduate of Harvard, he is engaged in farming at Peterborough and in the neighboring town of Sharon.

Just what the New Hampshire Progressives will decide to do in their meeting today at Manchester remains to be seen. Some of them believe in a third party and in a complete State ticket. Others feel that, having already been so successful in the State, they should continue the people's fight within the Republican organization.

Whatever happens, the people of New Hampshire will for all time have reason to be grateful for the administration of Robert Perkins Bass. Bass, when he was a young legislator, fathered the State-wide primary law, most comprehensive of its kind east of the Mississippi.

Here are some of the accomplishments of the Bass administration up to date:

Establishment of a public service commission.

Corrupt practices act.

Workmen's compensation and employers' liability law.

An automobile tax, graded as to size and power.

Legislation to save the Crawford Notch in The White Mountains.

Passage of a law forbidding the employment of children under fourteen when schools are in session.

And these are only a few of the Bass accomplishments. To tell the story of the administration would require a book.

Youngest Governor.

Robert P. Bass is the youngest of New England Governors. He looks even younger than he is. The stranger would not be surprised if he was told that the boyish-looking Governor of New Hampshire is under forty.

Governor Bass came to the surface at about the time that Winston Churchill entered upon the task of driving the Boston & Maine Railroad out of the management of New Hampshire politics and legislation. Bass would be the last man in his State to claim that "Bass did it all." He has had at different times the support of a splendid group of men including Dr. Tucker of Dartmouth, Colonel Churchill, Judge James P. Remick, William E. Chandler, Edward C. Niles, John M. Stratton, Professor T. W. D. Worthen, Rosecrans W. Pillsbury, Willis Metcalfe of the Rochester Courier, George B. French of Nashua, Louis B. Wyman, Clarence E. Clough, Allen Hollis and a number of others.

When Bass went after the governorship, two years ago, the cynical Old Guard said he would be beaten 2 to 1. He defeated the Old Guard candidate in the primaries by just about that odds, and then—in a year when Maine and Massachusetts slipped away to the Democrats—beat his Democratic opponent by approximately 7,000 votes. During the campaign he spoke in every county in the State, every city, and practically every one of the large towns.

Talked Plain English.

In that State-wide campaign the young Harvard man talked plain English. His straight-from-the-shoulder style made friends for him everywhere. And while the Old Guard has done its best against him—or its worst—the people of the State are still his friends.

One of the cries that Business-in Politics raised against Bass in New Hampshire was that he was a "Summer Resident." His home was in Chicago, they said.

While the sensible men of New Hampshire gave to this peculiar cry only the attention it was worth, the fact is that the Governor's mother was a New Hampshire woman and that one of his forbears, Jeremiah Smith of Peterborough occupied the Governor's chair exactly 100 years before the people gave it to Robert Bass. The same Jeremiah Smith was also a member of Congress from New Hampshire and a justice of the Supreme Court. The Smith homestead at Peterborough is the Bass farm of today.

Governor Bass was born in Chicago Sept. 1, 1873. His father, Perkins Bass, Dartmouth, '52, was a native of Williamstown, Vt. Perkins Bass located as a lawyer in Chicago in 1852. He was a vital force in the early life of that new great city. A close friend of Abraham Lincoln, he gave appreciated assistance in the Liberators' political campaigns.

When Governor Bass was nine years old, in 1882, his parents, answering the New England home call, came to Peterborough, New Hampshire, and upon a part of the original Smith holdings in that town, established a home which still remain the Bass residence. The Governor's father died in 1899.

BARRETT WOULD MAKE CANAL FREE

LONDON, July 20.—John Barrett, Director General of the Pan-American Union, referring to the Panama Canal in an address before the Chamber of Commerce, said:

"If I had my way I would make the canal essentially free to vessels of all nations, on the idea of the greatest good to the greatest number, that is, have the tolls based absolutely on the cost of operation and the same to every flag."

DAKOTA DAN'S OWN LIFE STORY

age of twenty-three. I left Melrose on June 5, 1885. It was on a Friday. I remember the day well.

I do not propose to enter into details here as to my boyhood days because I don't desire to furnish ammunition for any one else.

I was working for my father in the Common Sense Fertilizer Company. I had been working for him nearly three years.

Growing up into manhood, I wished to mingle among my social friends a little more. I asked my father to buy me a suit of clothes so I could take in the scenes of the old Boston Museum. It was about this time that Seymour sent to England after some girl performers. These girls were brought to the Boston Museum and their pictures were displayed at the front of the theatre.

Wanted to Attend Theatre.

They looked good to me and so I wanted to go in and see them like any other young man would at that time of life. But the odor of my clothes from working in the fertilizer factory was not such as would attract the attention of any of the fair sex—particularly any of those that were imported from England.

My father declined to purchase the clothes for me. I told father that if he gave me my own money I would buy a new suit.

I had been working for father and was to receive $15 a month. This money was not paid to me, but father deposited it in a Boston savings bank to my credit. When I wanted to buy the suit of clothes I proposed that he give me the money or an order to get it out of the bank.

He refused to do so, and I refused to work any more in the fertilizer company, and my father and myself had some words which resulted in my determination to leave home.

Describes Quarrel.

The quarrel took place between the house and the barn. My father came out with his slippers on and tried to compel me to go back to work. He said:

"You go over there and go to work, or you can go down and cut alder bushes."

I said: "It is no interest to me to go to work over there."

He said: "What is my interest is your interest?"

I said: "I don't see it that way. Give me money and I'll go for myself."

"You go out and see what you can do and you will come back home," said my father.

"When I come back home you will be dead," I replied.

There was no more conversation between my father and myself. Those were the last words that ever passed between us.

Talk With Mother.

I went into the house. I went upstairs to my mother's room and talked with my mother. My mother said:

"Daniel, you have no money and I don't know if I can get any money from Daniel (meaning my father) or not. I will try and get some. You had better not go away."

"Mother," I said, "I will go over to Boston to the office and see what I can do."

I came over to Boston to the fertilizer company's office. It was at No. 42 Congress street, room 5. Mr. Stafford, who was the superintendent or overseer, and I had a talk. After I had explained to him the circumstances he said he would wait and talk it over with my father.

I returned home. My mother tried again to persuade me not to go away, but I did not heed her advice.

She had given me $50. That was all she had, but she said if I would return that night and not say anything to father, she would try and get some more money.

My mother said to me:

"Daniel, if I do not get a chance to hand the money to you without your father seeing me, I will place it under the pasteboard on the writing desk in the library."

I said good-by to mother and I went down stairs. I took my hat and walked right straight out the kitchen door, right down by the barn and over the hill to the depot.

This was about 10 o'clock in the morning on Friday, June 5th 1885.

I sat down at the depot for a few minutes trying to think what I should do. I finally started uptown in Melrose, walking up Grove street. I kept on and walked through to Swaine's Pond. From there I went to Maplewood.

Slept Outdoors.

After walking about Maplewood for awhile and trying to make up my mind what it was best for me to do, I finally decided to go back home. I thought I would get the rest of the money my mother had promised me.

When I got almost to the house I again changed my mind because I thought my father and I would have more words, and it would be an unpleasant visit. So I lay down under the three pine trees back on the hill from our house and slept there all night.

On Saturday morning I got up and walked to Malden. I went down to the railroad track, where there was a little depot. Here I met a fellow whose name I afterwards learned was Bob Smith.

I did not know the man and he looked like a wanderer. He spoke to me first. He asked me for a quarter to get his breakfast. I said: "I haven't had my own breakfast yet."

His Outdoor Meal.

"Give me the money," he said, "and I'll go up and get a luncheon. I will bring it down here and we'll eat it together."

I, not wanting to expose myself where people that knew me might see me, agreed to do so. I gave him some money and he went up and got a luncheon and brought it back. We ate it together on the little side hill near the railroad.

That was my first meal after I had left home.

We talked things over together and finally became acquainted. He asked me if I was on the road. I said:

"Yes, practically."

"Well, he said, "I know where we can get a job if we can only get there."

He said it was up where they were then building a reservoir.

We wandered through Saturday. We walked up to a park and after getting something to eat remained on the benches all night.

I was very tired that night, and I slept very soundly. There were several other men asleep in the park also. When I examined my pockets in the morning, I found I had lost some of my money.

Then Smith and I continued on our way until we finally reached the reservoir, for which we had started the day before. This was on Sunday, and we couldn't see any show of work.

I told Bob about my relations in Providence, R. I.—Uncle James Hathaway and Aunt Mary and Uncle Thomas Howland and Phoebe. If we could get to Providence Uncle Thomas Howland would help me, and perhaps we could get work.

"There is a water tank up here," said Bob, "where we can catch a train."

We finally reached Providence. Bob bought a fishing line and went fishing on the dock, while I went out to hunt up my relations. I was unable to find them and returned to Bob on the dock.

CAPT. LATIMER MAY SUE PIERCE

Captain George T. Latimer of Company H, Fifth Infantry, M. V. M., who was acquitted of a charge of assault upon Police Inspector Henry M. Pierce, has consulted counsel with the intention of bringing suit against Inspector Pierce. He said:

"That matter is now in the hands of my counsel. I will probably hold several consultations with them early next week and expect to decide whether to continue the fight.

"I am satisfied with Judge Sullivan's verdict. It was as much as the lowest courts could for me. Beyond this I decline to say anything more."

Captain Latimer was acquitted of the charge of assault upon Inspector Pierce when the inspector placed him under arrest on Bunker Hill street, Charlestown, the night of July 12. The inspector, in his testimony, admitted using his blackjack upon Captain Latimer.

Mr. Stoner of Captain Latimer's counsel, is Lieutenant-Colonel of the Fifth Regiment. Mr. Sweetser is Colonel of the Eighth Regiment.

Dyer Asks Release from Contract to Take Boston Place

CINCINNATI, July 20.—Dr. F. B. Dyer, superintendent of schools, applied to the Board of Education today to be released from his Cincinnati contract, which has five years to run, in order that he may accept the offer of Superintendent of the Boston public school at $10,000 a year. "The Boston proposition," said Dr. Dyer, "is the leading educational office in the United States. To an educator it is the same as elevation to the Supreme Bench is to a lawyer."

Members of the Business Men's Club, Chamber of Commerce and Commercial Association are talking of raising a fund to be added to Dr. Dyer's Cincinnati salary, so as to make his remaining here financially equal to his Boston prospect. His Cincinnati salary is $7,500.

But Dr. Dyer put a quietus on this plan today when he said:

"I would refuse to accept money raised by popular subscription to hold me in Cincinnati. And I shall not go to Boston unless the Cincinnati Board of Education voluntarily releases me."

This puts the situation squarely up to the Board of Education. Dr. Dyer will leave here with regret if he does go.

"I have been here for years," he says, "and the schools of this city are the apple of my eye."

THINK YOUR'E NOT LUCKY? READ THIS

STOUGHTON, July 20.—Patrick L. Finn of this town is credited by his friends as being the original hard-luck man. Two days ago his wife and year-old baby fell down stairs and were severely injured. Three days ago his son Frederick got something in his eye and was compelled to undergo an operation. Yesterday his father died. A week ago his most trusted and valuable employe was struck by a baseball at a ball game. To-day he learned that he, Mr. Finn, would have to undergo an operation for intestinal trouble.

Japan Awaits Death of the Mikado

Leader in New Era of the Far East

Wonderful Advance Since Days When He Was Center of Famous Opera.

TOKIO, July 20.—Emperor Mutsuhito is slowly sinking tonight. One of the physicians in constant attendance at the bedside expressed the fear that his majesty could not survive many more hours.

The ministers of State have been in almost continuous session today preparing plans to meet the emergency that would be caused by the Mikado's death. The imperial prices were all hurriedly summoned from their Summer homes and arrived here today to join in the vigil about the royal bedside. The empress is in constant attendance on the dying monarch. The crown prince Yoshihito, who is recovering from an attack of chickenpox, is still confined to his bed, where he receives constant bulletins on the emperor's condition.

After another consultation of physicians this afternoon the Mikado's illness was diagnosed as typhoid fever. The Emperor has been unconscious since yesterday.

The Mikado of Japan was "discovered," as it were, by Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan, the light opera collaborators. They made the Japanese ruler known to the Western world in a way that he never was before.

While the Mikado of Japan was reputed among diplomats many years ago as an enlightened ruler and one far ahead of his immediate predecessors, it was not until 1886 or so, when the Gilbert and Sullivan opera "The Mikado" was produced, that the Mikado became a household word.

Considering that the Japanese hold their Emperor as a Sacred Being, one descended from the gods, there was more than comic opera incongruity in the idea of several millions of Anglo-Saxons associating the Ruler of Nippon principally with funny songs and stage effects.

However, the Mikado sprang into amazing popularity in the public mouth and his name was heard everywhere in snatches of song from the opera.

"Harmless Merriment."

One of the song hits in "The Mikado" was the Mikado's own song. One stanza runs:

A more humane Mikado never did in Japan exist,
To nobody second, I'm certainly reckoned
a true philanthropist;
It is my very humane endeavor to make
to some extent
Each evil liver a running river of harmless
merriment.

My object all sublime
I shall achieve in time,
To make the punishment fit the crime,
The punishment fit the crime,
And make each prisoner pent
Unwillingly represent
A source of innocent merriment,
Of innocent merriment

Progressive Ruler.

The worthy ruler of Japan, however, would have been intensely astonished and amused if he had known that he was seen only in a comic opera light by Occidental theatregoers.

It is a question, however, whether interest in the clever and progressive Mikado was not stimulated through the lyrical impetus of light opera.

At any rate, the public knows now that Emperor Mutsuhito of Japan is no comic or light opera character, but a ruler who has helped his nation forge ahead marvellously in a generation.

Mutsuhito was born in 1852 at Kioto. When he was sixteen years old he was enthroned by a revolution which restored his line to power after the Tycoons had usurped control for 200 years.

Mutsuhito transferred the seat of power to Tokio and inaugurated a reign which is boasted in Japan as "Enlightened peace or civilization."

He was ably seconded by his consort, the Empress Haruko, whom he married in 1869.

The Crown Prince.

The present Crown Prince, Yoshihito, was born in 1879. He is not the Empress' son. The Empress is childless. In order that the succession should not fail, Mutsuhito took morganatic or deputy wives. Yosho-Hito, the son of the deputy wives, was made Crown Prince at the age of two.

Mutsu Hito showed himself of imperial courage and ability. He broke up the powerful nobles, had absorbed the real power. The Mikado had become a nominal sovereign. Mutsu Hito showed himself a real as well as theoretical ruler. He surrounded himself with able advisers. He kept the Shoguns subdued. He worked steadily for the advance of the people.

Adopts Western Ideas.

In the royal palace at Tokio the Emperor gradually installed many Western improvements. He sleeps on a bed and not on a door mat. He wears clothes more of the English pattern, though he is girded with the two-handed sword of the Samurai on State occasions.

The rigid routine of official life has chafed the Mikado much. He submitted to his day being divided into periods for this and that, to the formalities of dress and to the elaborate ceremonials of court. But he has avoided extreme ceremony where possible.

To the Japanese people the Mikado is peculiarly hallowed. He is "heaven-descended, divine and sacred. He is preeminent above all his subjects. The law has no power to hold him accountable to it."

Western diplomats and statesmen, who have been brought in contact with the Mikado and his Cabinet, may not admit his divine descent, but they have allowed more and more, as years went on and Japan advanced, that Japan's political policies are something to be closely watched.

Opened Eyes of World.

The victories of Japan over China and then over Russia opened the eyes of the world wider than ever.

Now there are statesmen who say there is no limit to Japan's future.

This is the nation whose Mikado was discovered, so to speak, by a couple of light opera geniuses twenty-five years ago.

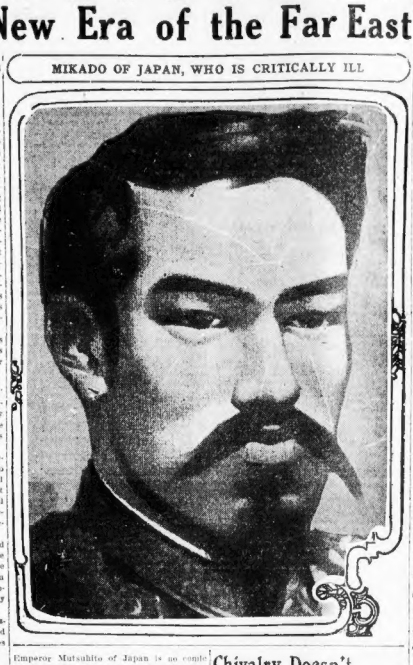
MIKADO OF JAPAN, WHO IS CRITICALLY ILL



Chivalry Doesn't Figure in Lynn Judge's Law View

It was not like that in the olden days,
In those days beyond recall,
Those rare old, fair old golden days,
When a man had but one wife at all.
—Raymond Hitchcock in "The Yankee Consul."

Judge Henry T. Lummus of the Lynn District Court ruled today that the "weaker sex" argument might have been a fine thing in the days of chivalry, but is not a good rule of law today.

This decision was given in the application of George Gould of Lynn for an abatement of the $5 a week payments he has been giving his wife since last January.

This George Gould is making the financial resources of the New York man of that name. In fact, his attorney, William F. Sisk, said in Judge Lummus' court:

"Mr. Gould is only twenty years old. He earns only $9 a week. He can't pay Mrs. Gould $5 a week."

Mrs. Gould's lawyer, John Harney, said: "Your Honor, if there is any suffering in this case, it should be on the man."

But Judge Lummus replied: "We don't look to the weaker sex in law. We go according to the evidence. Such an argument would be a fine rule of chivalry, but not a good rule of law."

Saying which, His Honor abated Gould's payments half a dollar a week.

$500,000 FIRE TODAY IN VANCOUVER, B. C.

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 20.—A fire that did damage amounting to $500,000 before it was checked broke out here early today. The Royal George Hotel and the Angelus apartment house were destroyed, many of their guests having narrow escapes.

DIVORCEE SLAIN; MAN ARRESTED

NEW YORK, July 20.—Mrs. Florence Hopp, a divorced, twenty-five years old, died in the New York Hospital today one hour after she had been shot while in a room in a hotel at Thirty-sixth street and Seventh avenue.

George R. Harkness, a real estate man, prominent at Sea Cliff, Long Island, where he lives with his wife, was arrested in the room with the unconscious woman and charged with the shooting.

Since July 1 Mrs. Hopp, whose home is in Lewisburg, Pa., has been living at the Hotel Calliagh, posing as Mrs. Harkness. Harkness has been a frequent visitor there. Early today a watchman in the hotel heard the sound of a shot in a room on the fourth floor.

After searching for some time to locate the source of the report, the watchman saw Harkness hurry out of the room, No. 401, and get into an elevator. Harkness went out into the street and, running up to Patrolman Thomas J. Cunningham, said: "I have shot my wife in the New York hotel." He returned to the hotel with the policeman and there was arrested.

Playmates Guard Boy Doomed to Starve to Death

WEBSTER, July 20.—Five-year-old Timothy Meagher is doomed to die of starvation. A bobbin in his throat is beyond medical skill to remove, and he can eat nothing. And, as he lies dying of hunger, a hushed, awed group of his playmates, forming a cordon about the house, is making sure he is not disturbed by street noises.

Since news of the boy's condition passed around the town there has been none of the accustomed sound of children playing in the vicinity. It is doubtful if the boy can live more than a day or two.

Science admitted that his case was hopeless. He has been submitted to an X-ray examination, which revealed that the spindle of the bobbin was firmly lodged in his throat at a place where removal was impossible.

The boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Meagher, and the little group of relatives and friends of the family gathered at the hospital were heartbroken on learning that the end was doomed. Sadly they made arrangements to take him back home. The journey was made as if they were already going to his funeral.

FIND PARASOL; RECEIVE $100

Things to remember tomorrow!
Go to Revere Beach!

Have a copy of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN in your hand, IN PLAIN SIGHT!
Use your eyes!

Some AMERICAN reader who follows this advice will be just $100.00 richer tomorrow night.

In today's AMERICAN will be found printed a picture of "The Lady with the Green Parasol." If you were told that that same identical woman would be on a certain street at a certain time and would carry a green parasol (which is surely a distinctive color and article), do you think that you could, from the printed picture and with this knowledge, recognize and identify her?

Perhaps you could!

We will see! Turn to the picture in today's AMERICAN of "The Lady with the Green Parasol." Study it carefully. Impress her face and figure on your memory.

The same identical woman whose picture is printed today will be at Revere Beach tomorrow. She will stroll along Ocean Avenue, the Boulevard and the beach from Cundil's Dance Hall to Revere street, between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock, on next Sunday afternoon, unless captured before 5 o'clock. The man, woman or child who identifies her will receive from her a Boston AMERICAN order for $100.00 in gold.

The only requirement is that the person who identifies "The Lady with the Green Parasol" have in his or her hand, IN PLAIN SIGHT, a copy of the Sunday AMERICAN of the current date and shall say to her, "You are the Lady with the Green Parasol."

Don't be afraid that "The Lady with the Green Parasol" will not be at the place appointed at the time appointed. SHE WILL BE THERE and some AMERICAN reader will be $100.00 richer because of her visit to Revere Beach.

She will not hide from you or attempt to conceal herself. She will not go into any building or other place where it would be possible for her to keep out of sight of the public.

She will be in plain view.

HELEN TAFT TO SERVE AT FAIR

Miss Helen Taft, the President's daughter, has become so interested in the preparations being made for the "Country Fair," to be held July 27 at the Montserrat Golf Club, that she has decided to take an active part in the affair. She will assist at the housekeepers' table together with Mrs. Bradley, Mrs. Washington B. Thomas, Mrs. Edward Holmes and others.

A fireless cooker is one of the novelties to be upon the table, and several Boston and other items of prominence have contributed generously to the fair.

The plans are under the general chairmanship of Miss Leslie Bradley, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Robert S. Bradley of Pride's Crossing. The fair has been planned to aid the work of the Children's Island Sanitarium at Marblehead.

Boy Firebug Will Be Sent to Institution at Parents' Request

The next eleven years of the life of James E. Welch, the ten-year-old, self-confessed firebug of Charlestown, will be spent in some State institution for boys. The youthful incendiary was in the Charlestown District Court today before Judge Preble. The judge placed the boy in the care of the State Board of Charities until he reached the age of twenty-one.

Jeremy J. Welch, the boy's father, and his wife were in court today. The father thought that the boy should be put away.

Little "Jimmie" Welch admitted to setting the fire in the hay sheds on Rutherford avenue, Charlestown, causing a loss of about $100,000. His only excuse for the act was that he wanted to see the fire engines go by.

STRIKERS PLAN NEW EVIDENCE

Elated at their partial victory in persuading District-Attorney Pelletier to present to the Grand Jury their charges against certain Elevated officials, the strike leaders and their attorney, James H. Vahey, said they were busy preparing further evidence to support their allegations.

The most startling evidence, it is stated, will consist in the stories of certain men, who appeared before the District-Attorney, to the effect that Elevated officials plainly told them they were discharged for union activities.

The strikers make two charges. They allege that certain division superintendents committed perjury before the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, by denying that they had discharged men for union activities. This question—the reasons for their discharge—the men claim was the crux of the investigation. There, they say, assert the superintendents misstated material facts under oath and so committed perjury.

Charge Discrimination.

The other charge is that the officials violated Section 12, Chapter 100 of the Statutes, which deals with the question of discrimination against union men.

It was also asserted before the district attorney that a conspiracy existed to bring strikers men to the city, invite riots and so cast disfavor upon the union. The evidence on this point was so vague, however, that the district attorney is not expected to act upon it and only the first two charges will be presented to the Grand Jury when it is called in special session Tuesday.

Mr. Pelletier heard the stories of some hundred street car men. In addition, he and Mr. Vahey carefully examined the records of the hearing before the State Board and his announcement that the Grand Jury would be called followed.

Barry Asks Conference.

Mayor Barry of Cambridge has sent to General Bancroft of the Elevated a letter, enclosing an order of the City Council, requesting the Mayor to confer with Mr. Bancroft with a view to ending the strike. Mayor Barry declared his willingness to take part in such a conference.

J. P. Morgan's Shave Will Cost 15 Cents at Lenox This Year

LENOX, Mass., July 20.—Predatory plutocrats, millionaires, near-millionaires, diplomats and near-diplomats who largely compose the summer colony here, are all laying odds today on whether the high cost of living won't force J. Pierpont Morgan into growing a beard now that Dunoo—surely you know Dunoo—has raised the price of a shave in his local barber shop from ten to fifteen cents.

Duclos has been shaving diplomats and millionaires, persons from Joseph H. Choate and George Westinghouse for the last thirty years. The high cost of living might skyrocket, but Duclos was indifferent and let it go at 10 cents a shave till today. This morning he posted a notice up to 15 cents. No kicks have yet been registered, but Mr. Morgan is due in September and his well known tendency to resist any inroads on his dividend may provoke a protest.

TWO STRANGELY DEAD FROM FUMES

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 20.—Two firemen are dead and five others ill as a result of being overcome by poisonous celluloid fumes while fighting a slight fire in the Callender block last Thursday night. Peculiarly enough, the men did not seem to feel the effects at first, but went to their homes, apparently all right, after being revived. Then later they became sick and Hoseman Edward J. L. Hogan and Fred McCaffrey of Hose Company No. 2 died at the Rhode Island Hospital.

Captain James M. Curtis, Hoseman George H. Borden, Hoseman Alexander M. McKay and Ladderman William J. Manton and John J. Deery of Hook and Ladder No. 1 are still ill, but will recover.

The blaze was in the plant of the Majestic Manufacturing Company and celluloid stored there threw off a dense smoke.

Bass Edits Sunday American

Leader of N. H. Progressives

GOVERNOR ROBERT P. BASS OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Up at Manchester today the New Hampshire followers of Theodore Roosevelt are trying to decide how far they want to "follow the leader."

Among these New Hampshire friends of Colonel Roosevelt is the progressive young Governor, Robert Perkins Bass of Peterborough, a statesman of particular interest to readers of the AMERICAN today because he will be editor of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Governor Bass is not yet thirty-nine years old. He is believed to be a millionaire. A graduate of Harvard, he is engaged in farming at Peterborough and in the neighboring town of Sharon.

Just what the New Hampshire Progressives will decide to do in their meeting today at Manchester remains to be seen. Some of them believe in a third party and in a complete State ticket. Others feel that, having already been so successful in the State, they should continue the people's fight within the Republican organization.

Whatever happens, the people of New Hampshire will for all time have reason to be grateful for the administration of Robert Perkins Bass. Bass, when he was a young legislator, fathered the State-wide primary law, most comprehensive of its kind east of the Mississippi.

Here are some of the accomplishments of the Bass administration up to date:

Establishment of a public service commission.

Corrupt practices act.

Workmen's compensation and employers' liability law.

An automobile tax, graded as to size and power.

Legislation to save the Crawford Notch in The White Mountains.

Passage of a law forbidding the employment of children under fourteen when schools are in session.

And these are only a few of the Bass accomplishments. To tell the story of the administration would require a book.

Youngest Governor.

Robert P. Bass is the youngest of New England Governors. He looks even younger than he is. The stranger would not be surprised if he was told that the boyish-looking Governor of New Hampshire is under forty.

Governor Bass came to the surface at about the time that Winston Churchill entered upon the task of driving the Boston & Maine Railroad out of the management of New Hampshire politics and legislation. Bass would be the last man in his State to claim that "Bass did it all." He has had at different times the support of a splendid group of men including Dr. Tucker of Dartmouth, Colonel Churchill, Judge James P. Remick, William E. Chandler, Edward C. Niles, John A. Beeton, Professor T. W. D. Worthen, Rosecrans W. Pillsbury, Willis McDuffee of the Rochester Courier, George B. French of Nashua, Louis E. Wyman, Clarence D. Clough, Allen Hollis and a number of others.

When Bass went after the governorship, two years ago, the cynical Old Guard said he would be beaten by L. He defeated the Old Guard candidate in the primaries by just about that odds, and then—in a year when Maine and Massachusetts slipped away to the Democratic—beat his Democratic opponent by approximately 7,000 votes. During the campaign he spoke in every county in the State, every city, and practically every one of the large towns.

Talked Plain English.

In that State-wide campaign the young Harvard man talked plain English. His straight-from-the-shoulder style made friends for him everywhere. And while the Old Guard has done its best against him—for its worst—the people of the State are still his friends.

One of the cries that Business-in Politics raised against Bass in New Hampshire was that he was a "Summer Resident." His home was in Chicago, they said.

While the sensible men of New Hampshire gave to this peculiar cry only the attention it was worth, the fact is that the Governor's mother was a New Hampshire woman and that one of his forbears, Jeremiah Smith of Peterborough occupied the Governor's chair exactly 100 years before the people gave it to Robert Bass. The same Jeremiah Smith was also a member of Congress from New Hampshire and a justice of the Supreme Court. The Smith homestead at Peterborough is the Bass farm of today.

Governor Bass was born in Chicago Sept. 1, 1873. His father, Perkins Bass, Dartmouth, '52, was a native of Williamstown, Vt. Perkins Bass located as a lawyer in Chicago in 1852. He was a vital force in the early life of that new great city. A close friend of Abraham Lincoln, he gave appreciated assistance in the Lincolnites' political campaigns.

When Governor Bass was nine years old, in 1882, his parents, answering the New England home call, came to Peterborough, New Hampshire, and upon a part of the original Smith holdings in that town, established a home which still remain the Bass residence. The Governor's father died in 1899.

BARRETT WOULD MAKE CANAL FREE

LONDON, July 20.—John Barrett, Director General of the Pan-American Union, referring to the Panama Canal in an address before the Chamber of Commerce, said:

"If I had my way I would make the canal essentially free to vessels of all nations, on the idea of the greatest good to the greatest number, that is, have the tolls based absolutely on the cost of operation and the same to every flag."

DAKOTA DAN'S OWN LIFE STORY

age of twenty-three. I left Melrose on June 5, 1885. It was on a Friday. I remember the day well.

I do not propose to enter into details here as to my boyhood days because I don't desire to furnish ammunition for any one else.

I was working for my father in the Common Sense Fertiliser Company. I had been working for him nearly three years.

Growing up into manhood, I wished to mingle among my social friends a little more. I asked my father to buy me a suit of clothes so I could be in the scenes of the old Boston Museum. It was about this time that Seymour sent to England after some girl performers. These girls were brought in the Boston Museum and their pictures were displayed at the front of the theatre.

Wanted to Attend Theatre.

They looked good to me and so I wanted to go in and see them like any other young man would at that time of life. But the odor of my clothes from working in the fertilizer factory was not such as would attract the attention of any of the fair sex—particularly any of those that were imported from England.

My father declined to purchase the clothes for me. I told father that if he gave me my own money I would buy a new suit.

I had been working for father and was to receive $15 a month. This money was not paid to me, but father deposited it in a Boston savings bank to my credit. When I wanted to buy the suit of clothes I proposed that he give me the money or an order to get it out of the bank.

He refused to do so, and I refused to work any more on the fertilizer company, and my father and myself had some words which resulted in my determination to leave home.

Describes Quarrel.

The quarrel took place between the house and the barn. My father came out with his slippers on and tried to compel me to go back to work. He said:

"You go over there and go to work, or you can go down and cut alder bushes."

I said: "It is no interest to me to go to work over there."

He said: "What is my interest is your interest?"

I said: "I don't see it that way. Give me money and I'll go for myself."

"You go out and see what you can do and you will come back home," said my father.

"When I come back home you will be dead," I replied.

There was no more conversation between my father and myself. Those were the last words that ever passed between us.

Talk With Mother.

I went into the house. I went upstairs to my mother's room and talked with my mother. My mother said:

"Daniel, you have no money and I don't know if I can get any money from Daniel cussing my father, or not. I will try and get some. You had better not go away."

"Mother," I said, "I will go over to Boston to the office and see what I can do."

I came over to Boston to the fertilizer company's office. It was at No. 42 Congress street, room 5. Mr. Stafford, who was the superintendent or overseer, and I had a talk. After I had explained to him the circumstances, he said he would wait and talk it over with my father.

I returned home. My mother tried again to persuade me not to go away, but I did not heed her advice.

She had given me $50. That was all she had, but she said if I would return that night and not say anything to father, she would try and get some more money.

My mother said to me:

"Daniel, if I do not get a chance to hand the money to you without your father seeing me, I will place it under the pasteboard on the writing desk in the library."

I said good-by to mother and I went down stairs. I took my hat and walked right straight out the kitchen door, right down by the barn and over the hill to the depot.

This was about 10 o'clock in the morning on Friday, June 5th, 1885.

I sat down at the depot for a few minutes trying to think what I should do. I finally started uptown in Melrose, walking up Grove street. I kept on and walked through to Swaine's Pond. From there I went to Maplewood.

Slept Outdoors.

After walking about Maplewood for awhile and trying to make up my mind what it was best for me to do, I finally decided to go back home. I thought I would get the rest of the money my mother had promised me.

When I got almost to the house I again changed my mind because I thought my father and I would have more words, and it would be an unpleasant visit. So I lay down under the three pine trees back on the hill from our house and slept there all night.

On Saturday morning I got up and walked to Malden. I went down to the railroad track, where there was a little depot. Here I met a fellow whose name I afterwards learned was Bob Smith.

I did not know the man and he looked like a wanderer. He spoke to me first. He asked me for a quarter to get his breakfast. I said: "I haven't had my own breakfast yet."

His Outdoor Meal.

"Give me the money," he said, "and I'll go up and get a luncheon. I will bring it down here and we'll eat it together."

I, not wanting to expose myself where people that knew me might see me, agreed to do so. I gave him some money and he went up and got a luncheon and brought it back. We ate it together on the little side hill near the railroad.

That was my first meal after I had left home.

We talked things over together and finally became acquainted. He asked me if I was on the road. I said:

"Yes, practically."

"Well, he said, "I know where we can get a job if we can only get there."

He said it was up where they were then building a reservoir.

We wandered through Saturday. We walked up to a park and after getting something to eat remained on the benches all night.

I was very tired that night, and I slept very soundly. There were several other men asleep in the park also. When I examined my pockets in the morning, I found I had lost some of my money.

Then Smith and I continued on our way until we finally reached the reservoir, for which we had started the day before. This was on Sunday, and we couldn't see any show of work.

I told Bob about my relations in Providence, R. I.—Uncle James Hathaway and Aunt Mary and Uncle Thomas Howland and Phoebe. If we could get to Providence Uncle Thomas Howland would help me, and perhaps we could get work.

"There is a water tank up here," said Bob, "where we can catch a train."

We finally reached Providence. Bob bought a fishing line and went fishing on the dock, while I went out to hunt up my relations. I was unable to find them and returned to Bob on the dock.

CAPT. LATIMER MAY SUE PIERCE

Captain George T. Latimer of Company H, Fifth Infantry, M. V. M., who was acquitted of a charge of assault upon Police Inspector Henry M. Pierce, has consulted counsel with the intention of bringing suit against Inspector Pierce. He said:

"That matter is now in the hands of my counsel. I will probably hold several consultations with them early next week and expect to decide whether to continue the fight.

"I am satisfied with Judge Sullivan's verdict. It was as much as the lower courts could for me. Beyond this I decline to say anything more."

Captain Latimer was acquitted of the charge of assault upon Inspector Pierce when the inspector placed him under arrest on Bunker Hill street, Charlestown, the night of July 12. The inspector, in his testimony, admitted using his blackjack upon Captain Latimer.

Mr. Sweeney of Captain Latimer's counsel, is Lieutenant-Colonel of the Fifth Regiment. Mr. Sweeney is Colonel of the Eighth Regiment.

Dyer Asks Release from Contract to Take Boston Place

CINCINNATI, July 20.—Dr. F. B. Dyer, superintendent of schools, applied to the Board of Education today to be released from his Cincinnati contract, which has five years to run, in order that he may accept the office of Superintendent of the Boston public school at $10,000 a year. "The Boston proposition," said Dr. Dyer, "is the leading educational office in the United States. To an educator it is the same as elevation to the Supreme Bench is to a lawyer."

Members of the Business Men's Club, Chamber of Commerce and Commercial Association are talking of raising a fund to be added to Dr. Dyer's Cincinnati salary, so as to make his remaining here financially equal to his Boston prospect. His Cincinnati salary is $7,500.

But Dr. Dyer put a quietus on this plan today when he said:

"I would refuse to accept money raised by popular subscription to hold me in Cincinnati. And I shall not go to Boston unless the Cincinnati Board of Education voluntarily releases me."

This puts the situation squarely up to the Board of Education. Dr. Dyer will leave here with regret if he does go.

"I have been here for years," he says, "and the schools of this city are the apple of my eye."

THINK YOUR'E NOT LUCKY? READ THIS

STOUGHTON, July 20.—Patrick L. Finn of this town is credited by his friends as being the original hard-luck man. Two days ago his wife and year-old baby fell down stairs and were severely injured. Three days ago his son Frederick got something in his eye and was compelled to undergo an operation. Yesterday his father died. A week ago his newly trusted and reliable employer was struck by a baseball bat at a ball game. To-day he learned that he, Mr. Finn, would have to undergo an operation for intestinal trouble.

Japan Awaits Death of the Mikado Leader in New Era of the Far East

Wonderful Advance Since Days When He Was Center of Famous Opera.

TOKIO, July 20.—Emperor Mutsuhito is slowly sinking tonight. One of the physicians in constant attendance at the bedside expressed the fear that his malady could not survive many more hours. The ministers of State have been in almost continuous session today preparing plans to meet the emergency that would be caused by the Mikado's death. The imperial prince were all hurriedly summoned from their Summer homes and arrived here today to join in the vigil about the royal bedside. The empress is in constant attendance on the dying monarch. The crown prince Yoshihito, who is recovering from an attack of chickenpox, is still confined to his bed, where he receives consistent bulletins on the emperor's condition.

After another consultation of physicians this afternoon the Mikado's illness was diagnosed as typhoid fever. The Emperor has been unconscious since yesterday.

The Mikado of Japan was "discovered," as it were, by Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan, the light opera collaborators. They made the Japanese ruler known to the Western world in a way that he never was before.

While the Mikado of Japan was reputed among diplomats many years ago as an enlightened ruler and one far ahead of his immediate predecessor, it was not until 1886 or so, when the Gilbert and Sullivan opera "The Mikado" was produced, that the Mikado became a household word.

Considering that the Japanese hold their Emperor as a Sacred Being, one descended from the gods, there was more than comic opera incongruity in the idea of several millions of Anglo-Saxons associating the Ruler of Nippon principally with funny songs and stage effects.

However, the Mikado sprang into amazing popularity in the public mouth and his name was heard everywhere in snatches of song from the opera.

"Harmless Merriment."

One of the song hits in "The Mikado" was the Mikado's own song. One stanza runs:

A more humane Mikado never did in Japan exist;
To nobody second, I'm certainly reckoned
a true philanthropist;
It is my very humane endeavor to make
to some extent
Each evil liver a running river of harmless,
merriment

My object all sublime
I shall achieve in time,
To make the punishment fit the crime,
The punishment fit the crime,
And make each prisoner pent
Unwillingly repentant
A source of innocent merriment,
Of innocent merriment

Progressive Ruler.

The worthy ruler of Japan, however, would have been intensely astonished and annoyed if he had known that he was for only in a comic opera light by Occidental theatregoers.

It is a question, however, whether interest in the clever and progressive Mikado was not stimulated through the lyrical impetus of light opera.

At any rate, the public knows now that Emperor Mutsuhito of Japan is no comic or light opera character, but a ruler who has helped his nation forge ahead marvellously in a generation.

Mutsuhito was born in 1852 at Kioto. When he was sixteen years old he was enthroned by a revolution which restored his line to power after the Tycoons had usurped control for 200 years.

Mutsuhito transferred the seat of power to Tokio and inaugurated a reign which is boasted in Japan as "Enlightened peace or civilization."

He was ably seconded by his consort, the Empress Haruko, whom he married in 1869.

The Crown Prince.

The present Crown Prince, Yoshi-Hito, was born in 1879. He is not the Empress' son. The Empress is childless. In order that the succession should not fail, Mutsu-Hito took morganatic or deputy wives. Yosho-Hito, the son of this deputy wives, was made Crown Prince at the age of ten.

Mutsu-Hito showed himself of imperial courage and ability. The Shoguns, or powerful nobles, had absorbed the real power. The Mikado had become a nominal sovereign. Mutsu Hito showed himself a real as well as theoretical ruler. He surrounded himself with able advisers. He kept the Shoguns subdued. He worked steadily for the advance of the people.

Adopts Western Ideas.

In the royal palace at Tokio the Emperor gradually installed many Western improvements. He sleeps on a bed and not on a door mat. He wears clothes more of the English pattern, though he is girded with the two-handed sword of the Samurai on State occasions.

The rigid routine of official life has chafed the Mikado much. He submitted to his day being divided into periods for this and that, to the formalities of dress and to the elaborate ceremonials of court. But he has avoided extreme ceremony where possible.

To the Japanese people the Mikado is peculiarly hallowed. He is "heaven-descended, divine and sacred. He is preeminent above all his subjects. The law has no power to hold him accountable to it."

Western diplomats and statesmen, who have been brought in contact with the Mikado and his Cabinet, may not admire his divine descent, but they have allowed more and more, as years went on and Japan advanced, that Japan's political policies are something to be closely watched.

Opened Eyes of World.

The victories of Japan over China and then over Russia opened the eyes of the world wider than ever.

Now there are statesmen who say there is no limit to Japan's future.

This is the nation whose Mikado was discovered, so to speak, by a couple of light opera geniuses twenty-five years ago.

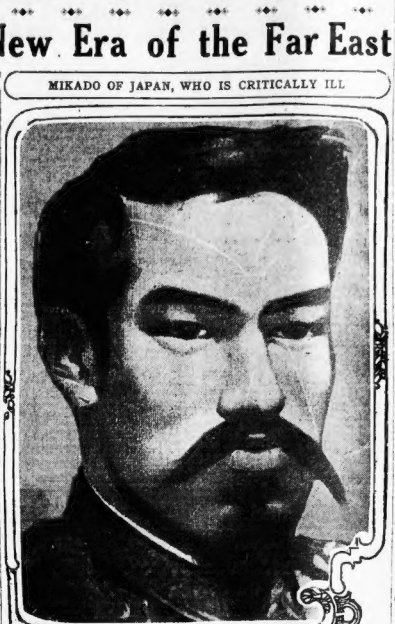
MIKADO OF JAPAN, WHO IS CRITICALLY ILL



Chivalry Doesn't Figure in Lynn Judge's Law View

It was not like that in the olden days,
In those days beyond recall,
Those rare old, fair old golden days;
It was not like that at all
—Raymond Hitchcock in "The Yankee Consul."

Judge Henry T. Lummus of the Lynn District Court ruled today that the "weaker sex" argument might have been a fine thing in the days of chivalry, but is not a good rule of law today.

This decision was given in the application of George Gould of Lynn for an abatement of the $3-a-week payments he has been giving his wife since last January.

This George Gould is backing the unmitigated resources of the New York man of that name. In fact, his attorney, William Sisk, said to Judge Lummus:

"Mr. Gould is only twenty years old. He earns only $8 a week. He can't pay Mrs. Gould $3 a week."

Mrs. Gould's lawyer, John Barney, said: "Your Honor, if there is any suffering in this case, it should be on the man."

But Judge Lummus replied: "We don't look to the weaker sex in law. We go according to the evidence. Such an argument would be a fine rule of chivalry, but not a good rule of law."

Saying which, his Honor abated Gould's payments half a dollar a week.

ROME, July 20.—Pope Pius was overcome by heat and fatigue today following the ceremonial for the ninth anniversary of the death of Pope Leo XIII. The Vatican physicians ordered His Holiness to suspend all public audiences until he recovered. Furthermore they advised the Pope to omit as much of his church work as possible during the balance of the Summer and spend his time in leisure.

$500,000 FIRE TODAY IN VANCOUVER, B. C.

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 20.—A fire that did damage amounting to $500,000 before it was checked broke out here early today. The Royal George Hotel and the Angelus apartment house were destroyed, many of their guests having narrow escapes.

DIVORCEE SLAIN; MAN ARRESTED

NEW YORK, July 20.—Mrs. Florence Hopp, a divorcee, twenty-five years old, died in the New York Hospital today one hour after she had been shot while in a room in a hotel at Thirty-sixth street and Seventh avenue.

George R. Harkness, a real estate man, prominent at Sea Cliff, Long Island, where he lives with his wife, was arrested in the room with the unconscious woman and charged with the shooting.

Since July 1 Mrs. Hopp, whose home is in Lewisburg, Pa., has been living at the Hotel Calleigh, posing as Mrs. Harkness. Harkness has been a frequent visitor there. Early today a watchman in the hotel heard the sound of a shot in a room on the fourth floor.

After searching for some time to locate the source of the report, the watchman saw Harkness hurry out of the room, No. 401, and get into an elevator. Harkness went out into the street, it is said, according to Patrolman Thomas J. Cunningham, said: "I have killed my wife in the New York hotel." He returned to the hotel with the policeman and there was arrested.

Playmates Guard Boy Doomed to Starve to Death

WEBSTER, July 20.—Five-year-old Timothy Meagher is doomed to die of starvation. A bobbin in his throat is beyond medical skill to remove, and he can eat nothing. And so he lies dying of hunger, a hushed, awed group of his playmates, forming a cordon about the house, is making sure he is not disturbed by street noises.

Since news of the boy's condition passed around the town there has been none of the accustomed sound of children playing in the vicinity. It is doubtful if the boy can live more than a day or two.

Science admitted that his case was hopeless. He has been submitted to an X-ray examination, which revealed that the spindle of the bobbin was firmly lodged in his throat at a place where removal was impossible.

The boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Meagher, and the little group of relatives and friends of the family gathered at the hospital were heartbroken on learning that the boy was doomed. Sadly they made arrangements to take him back home. The journey was made as if they were already going to his funeral.

Mrs. Gould's lawyer, John Barney, said: "Your Honor, if there is any suffering in this case, it should be on the man."

NATIONAL PACKING COMPANY, THE "BEEF TRUST," DISSOLVING

CHICAGO, July 20.—Actual steps in the dissolution of the National Packing Company began today. The $30 companies held by the company are being assigned to the three principal owners, the Armour, Morris and Swift interests.

The mailing of a printed notice to the department managers of the Armour Company, notifying them that forty-six of the National subsidiaries had been assigned to the Armour interests, has become public.

The assets held by the National are valued approximately at $50,000,000. The National itself is the company through which the government has frequently alleged the Beef Trust has been operated.

NORWELL HEN IS 21; STILL LAYING? SURE

Marshall Hatch of Norwell has a hen that is twenty-one years old. She is still laying. "The only trouble with her," says Marshall, "is that she's a little blind. She seems to feel her way to her feed, but if I let her out she's likely to get lost, so I keep her locked up."

HELEN TAFT TO SERVE AT FAIR

Miss Helen Taft, the President's daughter, has become so interested in the preparations being made for the "Country Fair," to be held July 27 at the Montserrat Golf Club, that she has decided to take an active part in the affair. She will assist at the housekeepers' table together with Mrs. Bradley, Mrs. Washington B. Thomas, Mrs. Edward Holmes and others.

A Sriless cooker is one of the novelties to be upon the table, and several Boston and other firms of prominence have contributed generously to the fair.

The plans are under the general chairmanship of Miss Leslie Brading, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Robert S. Bradley of Pride's Crossing. The fete has been planned to aid the work of the Children's Island Sanitarium at Marblehead.

Boy Firebug Will Be Sent to Institution at Parents' Request

The next eleven years of the life of James E. Welch, the ten-year-old, self-confessed fireing of Charlestown, will be spent in some State institution for boys. The youthful incendiary was in the Charlestown District Court today before Judge Preble. The judge placed the boy in the care of the State Board of Charities until he reached the age of twenty-one.

Joseph J. Welch, the boy's father, and his wife were in court today. The father thought that the boy should be put away.

Little "Jimmie" Welch admitted to setting the fire in the hay sheds on Rutherford avenue, Charlestown, causing a loss of about $100,000. His only reason for the act was that he wanted to see the fire engines go by.

I. W. W. DEFIANT IN NEW BEDFORD

NEW BEDFORD, July 20.—The Industrial Workers of the World today took a further step away from their co-strikers, the Weavers' Union, and the split between the two labor organizations was widened. For the I. W. W. presented its formal demands to the manufacturers, while the weavers let it be known they were willing to talk compromise.

Leaders of the I. W. W. are incensed over the threat of drastic action against them made by the police. Grover Perry, D. Pamboua and Miss Lor ,tta Narcotte berated the officials.

"It is like everything the police do," said Miss Narcotte. "They, not our members, are responsible for what trouble that has occurred. They are waiting around all the time to start a row, and it is always the poor workman who gets the worst of it.

"They are nothing but capitalistic policemen anyway. They are hired by the mill owners and they have to look out for the mill owners' interest."

Refuses Permit for Parade.

Chief of Police Henry W. Mason has refused a permit for an I. W. W. parade. The request for the permit was made by Grover Perry and was denied immediately.

Perry intimated that the parade might be held despite the action of the chief. He refused to make any definite statement, intimating that if the I. W. W. members did march, he did not want to give out the plans ahead of time so that the police might be warned.

Today is pay day at ten of the twelve mills which are now closed. The police are prepared to rigorously repress any outbreak.

The local ministers' union, after the meeting with representatives of the strikers, set about a further attempt to bring the manufacturers into conference. An open suggestion was made by Rev. Nathan Bailey, a former weaver of cotton cloth, that the manufacturers grant the mill workers the right of appeal in the individual operation of the grading system, to which objection has been taken.

Ministers Successful.

It is the ministers who have brought the weavers to the point of a conference, succeeding where the State Board of Arbitration failed. At a meeting attended by a committee from the union, President Samuel Connors of the labor body declared he was willing to enter into a truce with the manufacturers' association. Last Saturday, when requested to meet the manufacturers, he refused to consider it.

"We are willing to meet the manufacturers on this issue. We are perfectly willing to confer with them at any time and discuss the best methods for a settlement," was his statement.

It is not known whether the manufacturers affected will accept the offer. A prominent official of the association said: "Of course I could not say positively that we will keep our mills closed down all Summer. But that conclusion might be drawn from the wording of those notices," and he smiled.

Overtake Mott in Hong Kong
Climax of 4,000-Mile Pursuit

HONG KONG, July 20.—Hector Fuller, war correspondent and official guardian of J. Lawrence Mott, 3, has overtaken his charge, who fled May 18 with Mrs. Walter Bowne of New York, in a search for happiness and love.

Today the climax of the Mott-Bowne drama is being acted out. Fuller, in his chase half around the globe, has banked upon his own powers of persuasion, and his influence over the young man, to bring his charge back to New York. Mrs. Bowne is banking, in turn, upon her own charm, and the mutual affection which led her and Mott to cast aside everything for each other.

The whole world is watching to see which will win the battle. In the drama, Mrs. Mott plays the heroine, and Fuller is the villain—for the world's sympathies are apt to be with the woman.

Mott is the son of J. Lawrence Mott, founder of the Mott Iron Works of New York. Mrs. Bowne is a former actress, who starred in "The Chocolate Soldier," before accepting Walter Bowne, a millionaire living at Flushing, L. I. Bowne, since his first wife's flight, became involved in a certain difficulty with another lady, which resulted in a restaurant fracas and a black eye for Bowne.

Bowne has said he will sue for divorce. Mrs. Mott, on the other hand, will not seek freedom. She was Caroline Pitkin, daughter of Professor Charles A. Pitkin of South Braintree, and Mott wooed her in tempestuous fashion, won her and persuaded her to elope, while he was a student at Harvard. Nine years ago they were separated, and since she has lived with Mott's father, assisting the old man's efforts to cut short his son's wild oat sowing. Mott is a clever author with many short stories to his credit.

The two, Mott and Mrs. Bowne, fled from New York on May 18. How they had met is not known in detail. But when the rules of Madame Grundy, and the rigid conventions of Occidental society, began to hamper them, Mrs. Bowne sang softly—

"Take me somewhere East o' Suez,
"Where the best is like the worst,
"Where there ain't no Ten Commandments
"And a man——"

And Mott took her.

"Eastward in Eden" they fled, leaving New York on the tramp steamer Indradeo. They planned to go to Japan and settle. The Mott family started in quick pursuit. Mr. and Mrs. Mott sailed on the Lloyd liner Kronprinz Wilhelm and Hector Fuller, who for years has been Mott's guardian, caught the Mauretania.

The Indradeo's first stop was Gibraltar. There Fuller hoped to catch the two. But a railroad strike in the Pyrenees held him up, and the Indradeo sailed two hours before he arrived at the "Pillar of Hercules."

The Indradeo arrived at Port Said June 8. It had been expected she would coal there. Fuller hoped to catch her.

But the tramp did not delay to coal, and Fuller was again just too late.

The tale goes on, reading like the thrilling narrative in Jules Verne's "Eighty Days"—of a chase half way round the globe, of narrow escapes, misses by fractions of an hour, and of the final meeting at Hong Kong.

If Mott goes on to Japan with Mrs. Bowne, Fuller's long journey will have been futile. If not, Mrs. Bowne must come home alone.

MRS. WALTER BOWNE

FOSS FORMALLY ENTERS RACE

A full set of papers for Governor Foss' nomination for a third term on the Democratic ticket were today taken out by his assistant secretary, George M. Harlow.

Secretary Harlow was on hand as soon as the office of the Secretary of State was opened at the State House at 9 o'clock this morning.

Although it is customary to take out only a few papers, Mr. Harlow carried off a batch so large that it stirred comment.

The law requires that 1,000 signatures be procured in at least four counties, at the rate of 250 from a county. Governor Foss has decided to canvass the entire State. The western counties are to be given special attention.

The papers were carried to the executive chambers. They will be ready for signatures on Monday. No time is to be wasted in getting them circulated.

Secretary Harlow's visit to the office of the Secretary of State dispels any doubt that may have lingered concerning Governor Foss' third term ambitions.

Wyoming, New Queen of the Seas, Makes 22.045 Knots Record

ROCKLAND, Me., July 20.—The new battleship Wyoming, proclaimed queen of the seas as the result of her record-breaking performance in turning up 22.045 knots on her standardization trial, left here today for a series of trial runs down the coast. She will complete these probably about Tuesday and put in at Philadelphia. Her first trial on the coast run will be to maintain a speed of 20.5 knots for four hours.

The Wyoming's speed of 22.045 knots is declared by naval experts who were aboard to be the fastest time ever made by any battleship in the world carrying twelve-inch guns. The Arkansas, during her trials a month ago, placed the record at 21.493 knots.

In spite of a strike in the fireroom, the Wyoming not only broke the full speed record, but also bettered the Arkansas' average for the five top speed runs. The Wyoming's average was 21.323 knots and the Arkansas', considered a world's record until then, 21.153 knots. The vessel is 99 per cent. completed and, it is expected, will be put in commission the middle of August.

150 DEMOCRATIC CONGRESSMEN GO TO SEE GOV. WILSON

WASHINGTON, July 20.—One hundred and fifty strong, the sterling representatives of a cheering and triumphant Democracy climbed aboard a "special" at the Pennsylvania union station, and a few minutes after 8 o'clock were whirling merrily in the general direction of the "Little White House" at Sea Girt, N. J., there to see their standard bearer, Governor Woodrow Wilson.

Representative Thomas L. Reilly of Meriden, Ct.; Representative A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania and Alfred G. Allen of Ohio are the committee in charge of arrangements for the trip. Majority Leader Underwood, who also was an aspirant for the honor conferred upon Governor Wilson, is expected to join the band at Sea Girt. Republican members in the House today declared the trip of the Democratic Congressmen to Sea Girt would finally decide the length of time Congress is to be in session. Representative Anderson (Republican) of Ohio said:

"I believe that Mr. Underwood and the other members of the party will continue to legislate for campaign purposes until the latter part of August. This entire trip, as I see it, is an effort to learn what Congress shall do to help Woodrow Wilson."

HE'S BUSY SEEING DAUGHTERS WEDDED

PLYMOUTH, July 20.—Plymouth claims the record of having a citizen who will give in marriage more daughters in six months than any other one in the country. The father is Charles F. Hayden. Within a month, the youngest daughter, Marian, became a bride. Thursday another daughter, Mildred G., will marry, and the marriage of still another, Ethel F., will follow soon. The fourth daughter, Susan B., will marry a little later.

BAY STATE MEN SEE ROOSEVELT

OYSTER BAY, July 20.—A delegation from Massachusetts and Vermont arrived at Oyster Bay on the noon train to confer with Colonel Roosevelt over conditions in New England.

The colonel today began work upon the speech which he will deliver August 5 before the Progressive convention in Chicago. In this he will set forth his views on the campaign issues, one of the chief features being a discussion of the high cost of living poblem.

"The Democratic platform put the cause for the high cost of living upon the tariff," said the Colonel today. "I doubt if the tariff is as much responsible as the Democrats think. If all the tariff were moved, I am inclined to believe that the cost of living would not be lowered 10 per cent. It is something that has to be worked out. The trusts unquestionably enter into the cost of living problem.

"The aim of the progressives will be to find some solution of this question which is a vital one to every man in the country."

Comptroller Prendergast of New York is billed to make the speech in the third party convention putting Colonel Roosevelt in nomination for the presidency. Judge Ben Lindsey, of Denver, a Democrat, will second the nomination. Lindsay is also spoken of as the colonel's running mate. Roosevelt has a deep admiration for Lindsay and his selection as seconder of the nomination has his approval. The colonel likes the idea, too, of Lindsay being the vice-presidential nominee.

Herbert Knox Smith, who resigned his place as commissioner of corporations under President Taft, called today to talk to the Colonel about corporation control. Smith will take the stump for the colonel this Fall.

O'SULLIVAN OUT FOR BUTLER AMES' OFFICE

LOWELL, July 20.—Humphrey O'Sullivan today announced himself a candidate for Congress from the Fifth District, to succeed Butler Ames, who has announced his retirement. Mr. O'Sullivan is prominent in the Democratic party, and was a conspicuous figure at the Baltimore convention. He is the first man in the field from either party for the place of Congressman Ames. Other men whose names have been mentioned as possible candidates are Colonel James H. Carmichael, Democrat; J. W. Grimes of Reading, Democrat; former Mayor James R. Casey, Democrat, and John N. Cole of Andover, Republican.

BURSTING STEAM PIPE KILLS FIVE ON ITALIAN STEAMER

NEW YORK, July 20.—With five members of her cerw encased in coffins, the Italian steamer Principe Di Piemonte, from Genoa, arrived today. The dead men were the first assistant engineer, the chief fireman and three stokers, who had been killed by the bursting of a steam pipe. One other man in the engine room was scalded badly.

TAFT TO ANSWER MOOSE CHARGES

WASHINGTON, July 20.—President Taft is today putting the final touches to the reply to Colonel Roosevelt's repeated charges of "fraud" and the "stealing of delegates" in the Chicago convention.

The statement that will be issued from the White House, the final draft of which was considered at a two-hour meeting of the cabinet, will be an exhaustive analysis of the contest cases and a reply to all of the Roosevelt charges of unfair dealing on the part of Taft's friends on the Republican National Committee and the credentials committee.

While this statement, so far as can be learned, will not make any direct charges against the Roosevelt managers, it is understood that Taft supporters in the House propose to attack the contests brought by the Roosevelt forces in southern States, many of which were unanimously decided against Roosevelt contestants.

TAFT FIGHTS TO MAKE EDWARDS BRIGADIER

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Clarence N. Edwards, close personal friend of President Taft, and holding the rank of colonel in the army, may not come a full-fledged brigadier-general at all. The opposition to his promotion is based on the fact that because of his desk duties for almost ten years he has had little experience with troops. The President is bringing strong pressure to bear for confirmation.

ANOTHER REPLY BY MAC VEAGH

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 20.—When Sherman Allen was sworn in as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury today, Secretary MacVeagh took the opportunity to answer Dr. A. Piatt Andrew's latest attack in which he renewed charges that MacVeagh is incapable of managing treasury affairs and has disorganized the department staff.

In a speech to the heads of the treasury divisions assembled in the secretary's office, Maceagh said:

"Mr. Allen is a gentleman. I know his capacity for telling the truth, and I know he will tell it in the office as well as on the outside, and when the time comes for him to leave the service, Mr. Allen will be just as truthful of Lee McClung, treasurer of the United States, whom Dr. Andrew designated as one who had agreed with his charges, that the secretary is incapable."

As MacVeagh spoke he glanced in McClung's direction as though his remark were intended for him.

McClung refused to discuss the incident, except to say he had no idea the secretary was personal in his remarks. He reiterated he has no intention of resigning.

JOINT HEARING IN AYERS CHURCH

A joint hearing of the Ayers faction and the Bonsten faction in the Park and Downs Congregational Church at Wollaston will be held Saturday night, August 3, to attempt to end the strife which has split the church.

The trouble started when Chester A. Boynton of Revere sued the Rev. William B. Ayers for $25,000, charging the alienation of his wife's affections.

About one hundred members of the church unanimously adopted the recommendation of the standing committee that a joint hearing be held.

At the meeting the Rev. Dr. Asher Anderson of Boston, secretary of the National Conference of Congregational Churches, read a report to the members setting forth results of investigation he has just completed in New York regarding Mr. Ayers' service in the ministry at Watertown and Cape Vincent, both in New York.

Dr. Anderson's report exonerated Mr. Ayers, stated that people who had been quoted as speaking harshly of the minister originally repudiated such statements, charged that in one case at least there had been conclusive proof that certain men had misquoted statements to "further their own despicable ends," and said that people in the two towns spoke very well of the minister.

Mistakes had been made by Mr. Ayers, according to the statements made to Dr. Anderson by people of whom he inquired, but only such as might be expected from a young minister.

Closing his report, Dr. Anderson exhorted the church members to stand by their pastor, "who, conscious of his innocence, stands among his people free and unstained, his only ambition being to promote righteousness and love." he said.

The report from the standing committee was read by William J. Colby. It stated that for years the church had not been privileged to enjoy harmony in its ranks and that for the last year the church community had "been rife with all sorts of innuendoes, insinuations and open charges against the pastor and against some of his adherents."

As the best way to clear the air the plan of a joint hearing was broached and unanimously accepted.

His Hearing Was Restored

Veteran Could Not Hear His Beloved Bugle

Tells How Deafness Was Overcome

Below is a picture of Henry Farrar, a Civil War veteran, who is a natural born musician, and whose bugle has led troops to many a victory. With the approach of old age and the infirmities of various disorders, he gradually became more and more deaf until he could not hear his own bugle which he had been accustomed to play on various occasions throughout the year. He also became harassed with those head noises which so often accompany the advancement of deafness. This infirmity distressed Mr. Farrar greatly. He is a man of activity despite his age—in fact, he looks much younger than the 70 years that he is.

The loss of his hearing was a sad misfortune and the future looked very dark, of course, Mr. Farrar had tried one thing after another, he had followed medical advice, had consulted specialists and had allowed various devices and remedies, but all to no avail. He felt that he was doomed to end his life in total isolation and stillness which he dreaded by all who are unfortunate enough to be deaf.

Mr. Farrar has always been popular, and all his friends were exceedingly sympathetic, but even those kind sentiments did not alleviate his deep dejection. One day, however, he happened to learn of a simple and harmless home treatment, which he decided to try. He did not have much faith, however, for he had been disappointed so often. He sent for the treatment, and to his surprise and joy, he found that his hearing began to improve almost immediately and it continued until he became so well that he has recently done jury duty, listening to the various witnesses and the court proceedings without any slight difficulty.

Mr. Farrar is so delighted with the manner in which his hearing has been restored, and with the fearless and candid method in which the way which his health was generally improved, that he is giving information about this wonderful treatment to all who write him. He has nothing to sell, but he will cheerfully send full particulars of how his own hearing was restored, and will tell how others may get the same treatment. Persons of all ages—men, women and children—are using this method in their homes. Mr. Farrar, and many others, whose names have been reported after all else has failed. To obtain the desired information it is only necessary to write to Mr. Henry A. Farrar, 27 L, Main Street, Marshall, Mich., enclosing a stamped envelope for reply.

RED AND WHITE SOX STRUGGLE FOR FINAL GAME

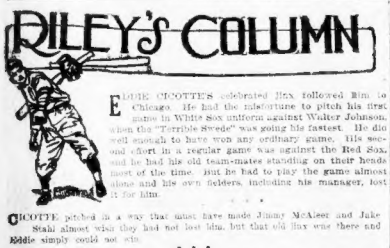
RILEY'S COLUMN



EDDIE CICOTTE'S celebrated flox followed him to Chicago. He had the misfortune to pitch his first game in White Sox uniform against Walter Johnson, when the "Terrible Swede" was going his fastest. He did well enough to have won any ordinary game. His second effort in a regular game was against the Red Sox and he had his old team-mates standing on their heads most of the time. But he had to play the game almost alone and his own fielders, including his manager, lost it for him.

CICOTTE pitched in a way that must have made Jimmy McAleer and Jake Stahl almost wish they had not lost him, but that old flox was there and Eddie simply could not win.

HE had the Red Sox guessing all of the time, and none of them made a hit until the sixth, when Gardner delivered a triple, but was thrown out trying to score on a squeeze play. The Red Sox made another hit in the seventh, another in the eighth in the ninth and tenth, but splendid work by Cicotte kept them from a sight of the platter, although Addie's team seemed to do all they could to put him in holes and keep him there. In fact, he had to pull himself out of his own troubles single-handed.

ALL of this time Hugh Bedient was pitching splendid baseball, too. One or the other had to crack some time, and it was Cicotte's misfortune to be the man. Bedient, himself, singled in the twelfth and then Hoop, or, after fooling the White Sox into the belief that he meant to bunt, smashed the ball to the centrefield fence, winning the game. The hit was good for a home run, but counted only two bases because Bedient scored as Hooper passed second.

IT was a great day for the "newspreds." Collins and Bedient both "came back." Of course, Collins has been back" from his honeymoon for some time and has been pitching the greatest baseball of his career ever since he arrived, but Bedient was not given an opportunity to have his honeymoon in peace, so he couldn't win in his own form for a time. Yesterday he worked in splendid shape and the White Sox found only eight hits concealed about him.

BEDIENT showed his old-time cleverness by pulling himself out of the few holes he stumbled into. There is no doubt that he has "come back" for good, and it is likely that he will improve from now on faster than he did before. He has the "making" of one of the best in the business and everybody is with him.

JIMMY CALLAHAN put Eddie Cicotte in a bad dilemma by dropping Lewis' fly in the fourth inning of the second game, but Cicotte pulled himself out. Callahan should have won the game in the fifth, when he let off with a single but, stole to second to see where Lord's double went, could never get beyond third. That into the box.

"NOW," said Hodie, "if I'd ever hit Collins I'd put it on the fence but somehow I couldn't see it at all."

COLLINS and Bodie joined in the run, but Lord and Chief Meyers failed to strike Bodie out every time he walked.

Dreyfuss Angry at O'Toole's Wildness

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 20.—That he is becoming tired and disgusted with the frequency with which Marty O'Toole, the pitching flinger for whom he paid the record-breaking price of $22,500, is being trounced was made known today by President Barney Dreyfuss, while holding a "post mortem" over the loss of the first game here yesterday with the Giants.

The "high-priced one" was outpitched by the comelier by "Rube" Marquard, for whom McGraw paid less than one-half the amount paid by the Pirate magnate for the little-polished hurler.

Dreyfuss was madder than a wet hen Sunday, and suggested that Carey should be censured for being caught napping off first base in the eighth chapter of the game, when Doyle made the run in this inning, and Carey being thrown out last another.

"It is all O'Toole's fault, and Clarke should not be blamed for the loss of that game," Dreyfuss said. "It is not necessary to pay a pitcher a high salary to go in there and hand out three walks in one inning. I can go out on the mound and do as good myself and have the salary of a pitcher. There is no excuse for such miserable pitching."

PILGRIMS RELY ON DONNELLY TO SOX GAMES

CINCINNATI, July 20.—Ed Donnelly will be Manager Kling's hope in today's contest with the Reds. Hank O'Day also has figured on taking the final game and will send Arthur Fromme to the ground to hold the visitors in check.

The Boston Pilgrims may not win many games, but they are always dangerous, as is attested by the series in this city to date. Yesterday's game really belonged to the Boston squad if they had only gave their rattler the proper support.

The Pilgrims clever left-hander, George Tyler, held the Reds to five scattered singles, but was beaten, 3 to 2 through rank errors behind him.

The visitors could do little with the curve ball of Bert Humphries and would not have scored a run but for the wildness of Bob Bescher in left field. They got their first run off Bert, but he kept them well separated and had the visitors tapping the ball up in the air most of the time.

Both pitchers had excellent control and were hit so lightly that there was not much opportunity for clever fielding, so the game was without a distinguishing feature.

Marsans, who has been playing the fastest game with the Reds since he became a regular, was out of the game with an injured hand incurred in catching a line drive from McDonald's bat in Thursday's game. Hatter took his place, while Dick Tyler likes, as it gave him one more left-hand batter to work against. Hatter did not hit a ball, while Marsans is always dangerous for the southpaws.

Hank Gowdy, on crutches as a result of being spiked by Bescher yesterday, will not be able to play for a week or more and Bob Hosser went to first base for the Pilgrims.

The Reds started the scoring on the fourth round, getting two runs on one hit and a bundle of wobbles. With one out, Phelan was safe on a fumble play by O'Rourke. Hatch singled sharply to left and Jackson's throw-in was so wild that both runners moved up a base. Esmond hit to Mitchell, who had a certain play at the plate, but threw high to Kling and Phelan slid in with the first run of the game. Larry forced Esmond at second, but saved a double play by fast sprinting and Egan scored. Humphries whiffed for the third out.

An error by Beecher gave the Pilgrims their first tally in the sixth. With two out and Jackson on first, Titus doubled to left and Beecher threw madly past second. This let Jackson get to third and Titus scoring, while Stroud John pulled up at third. Hosser lifted to Hobby for the third out.

The Reds got this back in their half of the same round on singles by Phelan and Larry.

Cy Morgan Refuses To Be Sent to Minors

PHILDEALPHIA, July 20.—Cy Morgan, the veteran pitcher of the Athletics, who was released last Monday to the Kansas City Club of the American Association by Manager Mack, asserts that he will not join the Western club. Morgan is still in the city and has made no move to leave for the West. He has been enjoying himself touring the surrounding country in his automobile since receiving notice that he had been released.

"Aw, nix on Kansas City," he said today. "Think I'm going out in the Middle West to die of heat prostration? I guess eh. It's me for little old Martin's Ferry. I'm for the big city show or nothing."

Cyrus Morgan, spitball artist, orator and former "White Elephant," delivered his self of the speech, looked aggrieved and punched downward until his neck settled in the top of the driver's seat in his automobile. He waved his disengaged hand in airy explanation.

"Yep, I'm going to hit the road for Martin's Ferry. You said it some. Independent tackling. Guess I can manage to pull enough of the leader green stamps pitching for independent teams." The colonel rang laughed cynically. "No, my friend, I'd ben a dutiful boy and take a spanking with no come back. Rooted 'em, and I'm on my way to go to Kansas City as the St. Louis Browns are to win the pennant. Well, I'm not interesting around Philly. Never had so much time on my hands before."

British Athletes Far Below Yankee Rivals

Coach Parker Says English Olympic Competitors Need Years of Training to Beat Americans.

LONDON, July 20.—Apologies and explanations for British failures in the recent Olympic track and field events at Stockholm, Sweden, still provide abundant copy for the press of London.

The Evening Press prints a very entertaining interview with F. W. Parker, chief advisory coach of the British team, who arrived today from Stockholm.

Parker claims that nothing but radical changes in British methods will enable the Britons to make any sort of a showing against the champion Americans at the next Olympic games. He thinks that his country who has in Olympic sides clone.

He urges that years instead of months should be devoted to the development of talent, and that quality rather than numbers should be the future aim.

Parker pays a glowing tribute to the fine condition of the United States representatives. He says his own men were thoroughly trained and that they ate twice as much as was good for them.

The Britons, he says, paid little attention to training hours or training rules. In conclusion he declared that the United States athletes "climbed on" his team as though they were forward to the English men.

W. G. Thomas, trainer of the British Marathon runners, declared today that his men were not in connection with the athletes Hooper delivered what should have been a home run drive to the centre field bleachers (see, but which only counted for two bases because Hooper had just passed second when Yerkes crossed the plate with the winning run.

The seven hits that the Red Sox made off Cicotte were scattered through seven innings. Eddie had to play his own game practically alone. He was constantly fielding him out at first, and scored the only White Sox run in the fifth, when after Lord drew his sacrifice bunt and went to first and Sullivan had been thrown out at the plate, he scored on an attempted double steal in which Callahan was caught between first and second. Jimmy dodging back and forth until Eddie was safe after Carrigan's low throw to second.

Callahan himself put Cicotte in a hole in the fourth by dropping an easy fly from Lewis' bat with none out. Cicotte pulled out of this dilemma by retiring Lewis at third on Gardner's drive to the pitcher. Callahan should have scored the run which would have won, in the fourth inning. He led off with a single. Lord sent a slashing double across first base and nobody had a chance to catch it, but Callahan stopped to see where it went when he crossed second and had to pull up at third. Bedient then gave an example of great pitching by retiring the next three men.

Wood and Walsh in Final Battle Big Game Today at Fenway Park

although they had to go twelve innings to take the second. Both games showed the worth of the two Red Sox pitchers, Collins and Bedient, who had the White Sox in their mercy, and in the second struggle, Eddie Cicotte, who was sold by McAleer to Comiskey, nearly beat his old teammates by his splendid exhibition in the box.

But neither Cicotte, nor Benz, who pitched the first game for the White Sox, had even fair support, the White Sox making seven errors in each game.

The first game was in a 10 0 offing, Ray Collins letting but one White Sox—Rath, in the first inning—reach third base. They made only three hits off Collins, but he gave not one base on balls and only four men, besides Rath, reached second base.

First Game Was Easy.

The Red Sox pieked off nine hits and scored in all but three innings. Gardner did the most of the hitting, storing up three safe ones. In the first, Speaker singled, took second on Callahan's fumble and scored on Hild, but was left there. Gardner singled, moved to second when Lord fanned, Stahl's drive advanced to third on Wagner's sacrifice, and scored when Lord, slipping with Carrigan's bunder, had to throw to first instead of to the plate.

Speaker walked in the third, and he and Lewis scored on hits by Lewis and Stahl and errors by Weaver and Rath. Speaker walked again in the fifth, stole second; Lewis walked, and both scored on Gardner's single and Leibold's muff of Stahl's drive. Lord made a third error in the seventh, giving Lewis a chance, and Duffy and Gardner batted out a two-base hit and Stahl's sacrifice fly and Wagner's drive that carromed off both Benz's and Weaver's gloves.

The Red Sox completed their eight runs with another in the eighth, when Hooper singled, advanced when Speaker walked and scored when Wood's drive advanced to third on Carrigan's sacrifice fly, crossed the plate.

It took twelve long innings to settle the second game, which the Red Sox won, 2 to 1. The game should have been finished in the ninth, when Callahan's single should have won, notwithstanding Bedient's excellent pitching, but errors of play and judgment lost him the end.

Cicotte in Great Form.

Cicotte was in great form, and his former associates could not find a place for a hit until the ninth, when Hooper lifted a fly to the second, when Weaver fumbled Lewis' drive, advanced on Gardner's out and scored when Wood, with a chance for a double play with Wagner's grounder, dropped the ball after making a clean, fine stop.

Notwithstanding his fielders made seven errors, all told, Cicotte alone kept the Red Sox from scoring again until the twelfth inning, when after Bedient had singled Hooper delivered what should have been a home run drive to the centre field bleachers (see, but which only counted for two bases because Hooper had just passed second when Yerkes crossed the plate with the winning run.

The seven hits that the Red Sox made off Cicotte were scattered through seven innings. Eddie had to play his own game practically alone. He was constantly fielding him out at first, and scored the only White Sox run in the fifth, when after Lord drew his sacrifice bunt and went to first and Sullivan had been thrown out at the plate, he scored on an attempted double steal in which Callahan was caught between first and second. Jimmy dodging back and forth until Eddie was safe after Carrigan's low throw to second.

Callahan himself put Cicotte in a hole in the fourth by dropping an easy fly from Lewis' bat with none out. Cicotte pulled out of this dilemma by retiring Lewis at third on Gardner's drive to the pitcher. Callahan should have scored the run which would have won, in the fourth inning. He led off with a single. Lord sent a slashing double across first base and nobody had a chance to catch it, but Callahan stopped to see where it went when he crossed second and had to pull up at third. Bedient then gave an example of great pitching by retiring the next three men.

CHICAGO CLINCHES WESTERN GOLF TITLE

DENVER, July 20.—Chicago, for the fourteenth time, has clinched the Western Amateur golf championship, and the last battle today at the Denver Country Club will be between Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, champion in 1906, and Warren Wood of Homewood, runner-up in 1906.

Evans defeated Harry Legg of Minneapolis, the former Yale player, 4 and 3, and Wood defeated Jack Neville of San Francisco, the coast champion, 5 and 3.

The course yesterday was faster than on the preceding days, and some fine golf was played.

ENTER IN WORLD SERIES CONTEST

Any New England "fan" who enters the American Baseball Contest now and plays the game properly—just as he would in a real baseball game—by putting forth all his energy and activity, may feel assured that the chances are excellent of obtaining one of the coveted free trips to see the world's championship games.

The contest has only just begun. The real work has not yet started on that now is the time to get into the game.

It costs a lot of money to see a world's championship series—and see it properly. It is necessary to travel from city to city to live at hotels, to pay the price of the baseball park tickets, and all in all, it runs into a considerable cash outlay.

You have all the chance in the world if you will only send in that nomination blank today and get out on the scrapping line without delay. You will find the blank on another page.

Do not send in more than one nomination blank for any one person. The special nomination credit is good only for the first nomination received for any person. Flag Race a Cinch for Giants, Declares Mack PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—Connie Mack, leader of the world's champion Athletics, announced today that the Giants, in his opinion, have the National League pennant cinched.

"McGraw's team will waltz over the finish line pulled up, by about twenty games. I do not know who will win in the American League," said Connie, "I have not given up hope. But whoever wins will have a tough time of it in the world's series. The New York Nationals strike me as 'some class' all right."

LIL ARTHUR NOW IN POLITICAL RING

JACK JOHNSON AFTER NEW WORLDS TO CONQUER

By JACK CONWAY.

MR. John Arthur Johnson of Chicago, statesman!

How does this sound to you? Kind of humorous, eh? Well, it plain Jack Johnson, heavyweight champion of the world, ahead of every member of the white "hope" brigade, holder of all world's records for getting arrested for auto speeding and one of those eccentric boxers ever known to the world of sport has his way he will be a rival of "Fighting Teddy" Roosevelt, Silent Bill" Taft and W. Wilson inside of a few years.

To make a long story short, the king of the heavyweights is desirous of entering politics. He has got an idea that he would be as good at winning votes as he now is at vanquishing aspirants for ring honors.

Johnson is a wonderful man. There is no denying this fact as the burly negro admits it himself. And who should know more about Mr. Johnson than "Lil Artha"?

Jack has already entered business in Chicago. He recently opened the "Café de Champion" and is doing well. The place has been patronized by big crowds since it opened, and, needless to say, Johnson has been on hand to receive his customers with open arms.

BOMBARDIER Wells, the English heavyweight champion, is feeling better today than he did after he was knocked out in three rounds by Al Palzer. Wells' ailment has been caused by his decisive victory over Tom Kennedy, the New York heavyweight whom he knocked out in three rounds the other night.

The Briton is being boomed as the real white "hope" over in the big town. He is a wonderful boxer and can hit fairly hard, and in addition to that, he cannot administer punishment as he showed when he met Palzer. And where does a boxer fit in this twentieth century of progress and learning who cannot take punishment?

Wells and Palzer boasted a hundred dollar forcent ways in the first two rounds of their bout. But when the powerful Iowa farmer boy began to land some stiff body blows the Englishman was forced to retreat. He finally was sent to the canvas for the fatal count. Palzer was also battered severely, but proved that he has a strong as the proverbial lion.

If a boxer is big and strong, he can be taught how to box in the majority of cases, but if, on the other hand, he is weak and frail like Wells, he cannot be developed into a champion ring performer.

JIMMY WALSH will probably not clash with Phil Brock at Cleveland on next Monday night. Eddie Keerin, Walsh's manager, and the management of the Forest City Club have been unable to reach a satisfactory agreement.

Walsh is now passing away his time at Lynbrook, where he is giving boxing lessons. There are few men in the business who know more about the art of self defense than Walsh does. He is very fast on his feet, cool, can hit fairly hard, and most important of all he uses headwork. He proved that he is one of the best men of his weight in the world when he held Johnny Kilbane to a draw at the Pilgrim Club last Spring.

THE Armory A. A. will probably open in September. If you want to start some excitement offer a prize for the man who can tell where Miah Murray's organization will hold forth. Just now there is a boxing "fan" in New England who has not been confidently told where the club's new quarters will be. The number of "probable sites" has now passed the 1,000,000 mark and is rapidly increasing. With bouts at the Pilgrim A. A. and the Armory A. A. next Fall and Winter, this talented old town should be very much on the fight map.

Delehanty Released by Detroit Tigers

DETROIT, July 20.—Jim Delehanty, the Detroit infielder and outfielder, has been released by Manager Hughey Jennings. The release of Delehanty ends the passing out of the big leagues of the last member of the famous Delehanty brothers, all of whom were wonderful diamond stars.

Delehanty was considered one of the best players in the American League when he was traded to Detroit by Washington several years ago. At the time he was an infielder and covered second base for the Tigers.

"Del," like his brother Ed, who is now dead, was a great hitter, his timely clouts for extra bases winning many a game for Jennings' crew when the Tigers were fighting for the pennant in the American League. Delehanty slowed up this season and has been playing the outfield. Jennings is planning several more changes in his club.

GRIFFITH SIGNS YOUNG PITCHER

YORK, Pa., July 20.—Pitcher Eby of the North York baseball team, will be given a tryout by Manager Clark Griffith of the Washington American League team. Griffith was tipped off on this player by William Hollander, the Georgetown University star.

New Trotting Record for Season Is Set Up

KALAMAZOO, Mich., July 20.—Another candidate for the M. and M. stake will be entered tomorrow when the Recreation Park yesterday during the racing off of the final program of Grand Circuit racing.

This was the New England-owned trotter Dictator Tod, driven by Tom Murphy, who won the 2:15 trot in straight heats, taking a record of 2:08¼ in the second heat.

There was plenty of good racing in the other classes, the free-for-all trotters putting up an especially brilliant contest, a new trotting record for the season being established in this event.

It was a long program, a total of seventeen heats being trotted and paced during the afternoon. The mare Ruth McGregor was favorite in the 2:15 trot, but when it came to racing she was not a match for Dictator Tod, although she was much better than the balance of the field.

BATTLING JIM AND JOE IN TAME BOUT

PHILADELPHIA, July 20.—Joe Jeannette and Battling Jim Johnson went six rounds at the Olympia and at the end Jeannette was awarded the popular decision. Neither man was marked at the finish and both were good for many more rounds. Johnson continually buried his huge frame at Jeannette and Jeannette could not do effective work.

The bout was slow from the first tap of the gong. Both Jeannette and Johnson stalled and clinched, and before the end of the first round the fight had developed into a wrestling match.

BIG BIKE RACES AT BEACH OVAL

Cycle race followers are ready for the big card at the Revere Beach oval this evening. The main interest centers in the two sprint champions, Frank L. Kramer, fifteen times American title holder, and Leon "Tricky" Comes, the holder of the sprint championship of France.

Kramer is as good as ever, and the way in which he negotiated the small track made it apparent that Comes will have his hands full in trying to beat the Jersey sprinter. Comes is strong and has speed to burn.

Their first heat will be for a half-mile, the second for a mile, and if a third is necessary, a coin will be tossed and the winner shall name the distance.

Joe Nelson, the middle-distance rider, made a fine impression and was given an ovation by his old friends. It is a long time since he raced here, but the Swedish rider plainly showed yesterday that he still retained his ability to follow pace. Jimmy Moran and Nat Butler, who will oppose him in the twenty-five-mile race, will have all they can do to beat him.

Alienists Examine 'Dick' O'Brien Today

LEWISTON, July 20.—Alienists today will decide the question of the sanity of "Dick" O'Brien, the once famous middleweight, whose relatives have requested the authorities to put him away for safe keeping.

O'Brien was widely known, not only in this country, but in England, fifteen years or more ago as a leading pugilist. When but seventeen years old he won the Maine championship in his class and then set out for wider fields to conquer. He fought many battles with success in Boston and elsewhere in this country and then went to England, where he defeated the "Coffee Cooler" in two rounds.

In this country he fought Dan Creedon, Joe Walcott, Young Corbett, Maffit Flaherty and many others, and in his prime was considered one of the leading middleweights of his time.

He has been broken down for some time and about a year ago was in a hospital in this city and was reported to be dying, but rallied, though he has never been right mentally or physically since.

He lives with his mother in a little house on West Bowdoin Hill, but his condition has become such, according to his relatives, that there is need of his being taken care of.

Death Blow to Prize Fight Moving Scenes

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Prize fight moving pictures became a thing of the past in the United States when the House passed a Senate bill prohibiting the transportation of such moving picture films across the various States and Territories or from foreign countries.

Heavy fines for violation of the proposed law are fixed by the bill. The President said to be in complete sympathy with the legislation, is expected to affix his signature to the measure.

Southern members of Congress are especially interested in the proposed law because of the race feeling stirred up by the exhibition of the Jeffries-Johnson moving pictures in their section of the country.

Senator Simmons of North Carolina and New Jersey Senator Hardwick pressed the bill in the Senate and House.

Western Club Head Is Given Heavy Fine

CINCINNATI, July 20.—Donald D. Dennis, former president of the Lincoln club of the Western League, was fined $200 by the National Baseball Commission for violating the letter and spirit of the national agreement while president of that league.

The commission said that during the investigation of the salary claim of Player Dougherty against the Lincoln club, evidence was submitted which indicated that Dennis while president of the club had signed an agreement to pay Gagnier at the close of the season of 1911 $25 a month in excess of the salary stipulated by his regular 1911 contract, in violation of the salary limit of the Western League.

Mr. Despeld was adjudged ineligible to connect himself with a national agreement club or league in any capacity agreement of his fine through the secretary of the commission.

South Boston Stars in Diamond Battle

The South Boston All-Stars will battle with the Gillette team at the Locust street grounds this afternoon. Both teams hail from the Peninsular district and the contest is sure to be close and interesting. The Gillette team has strengthened its lineup by the addition of Finley of the Everett-Chelsea team, Sullivan of the Maine State League, Butler of the Eastern League and Hayes of the Missouri team.

The South Boston All-Stars have in their line-up Dempsey, the Mechanic Arts High catcher; Bagley who pitched for the old Stoughton team; Brady, the former City Point star; Clancy of Ipswich; Evans, formerly of South Boston High; Egan of Westford, boss of the Old Colony League, and Keating and Lambert of the South Boston Red Sox.

Spend Fortune to Strengthen Yankees

NEW YORK, July 20.—Though cursed with possibly the worst team in the two major leagues, Frank J. Farrell, the magnate of the New York Highlanders, is not sitting down and crying about it.

He is spending good money trying to gather a bunch of players capable of holding their own in the American League. Already he has tied up $25,000 to corral half a dozen shining minor league lights.

Maloney and Dowd, two of the five from the Brockton club of the New England League, have joined the Yankees. Dowd was too costly for the big leaguers, but was snapped up by Scout Irwin.

Davis, the crack William College pitcher, just signed, now begins drawing $5,000, though he has never toiled a game in the big show.

Keating, the New England league twirler, got the Highlanders $2,000, and he will not join them until September. He is said to be sore of making good. Thompson, the University of Georgia twirler, has yet to show what he has.

Sterrett, Princeton's catcher, is the best of all the youngsters pressed into service by Manager Wolverton. Indeed, the only one earning his salary. He is certain to be retained.

Wolgast Not Eager to Tackle Rivers

LOS ANGELES, July 20.—Conflicting statements regarding the attitude of Ad Wolgast and Joe Rivers left the question of a return battle between the lightweight champion and the challenger on Labor Day much in doubt today.

A statement signed by Wolgast was published declaring the champion was willing to meet Rivers six or seven months hence, or whenever the champion felt he was "right."

At the same time another statement was published giving the result of a stormy session between the managers of Wolgast and Rivers, and asserting there would be no fight at any time.

Tom McCarey, promoter of the Pacific Athletic club, said he was all at sea, and that though Rivers had signed, Wolgast or her had shown no disposition to follow suit.

Western Stars Compete in Meet

COPENHAGEN, July 20.—Some of the Pacific Coast Athletes on the American Olympic team competed at the Stadium here against the Danish athletes.

Ralph Rose won the right and left hand discus with a combined throw of 232 feet and the right and left hand shot put with 90 feet 11 inches. He was third in the javelin, won by Peterson of Denmark.

James J. Donohue of Los Angeles won the pole vault at 10 feet 10 inches, and George Horine of Stanford University, was second. Horine won the high jump at 5 feet 11¾ inches and Donohue was second.

A Want Ad. often leads to fortune.

DIAMOND GAME HAS ITS LUCKY SIDE

JONES DIVIDES BASEBALL INTO GOOD AND BAD

By BILL BAILEY.

CHICAGO, July 20.—Fielder Jones, great outfielder and one of the most successful managers who ever bossed the South Side crew, used to contend that there was no such thing as luck in baseball.

He couldn't see luck. If a pitcher was tossed from the slab it was because he was foul. If a man hit one over the fence instead of against the screen it was because he was a mighty batter.

If a man hit one four inches fair instead of six inches foul that was not to be counted as a lucky blow.

But I wonder what Fielder would have said could he have been the clouting of Jerry Downs in one of the recent games between the Cubs and the Boston Pilgrims. Not that Downs' hits were lucky. Fielder would have said there was nothing of luck about them. To which all would have agreed. But it was something akin to luck which got Downs in the game.

He succeeded Evers. Any time that the Trojan gets out it is considered bad luck. But in this instance he was succeeded by the recruit who slammed out three hits and drew a base on balls.

He slammed in the run that tied and then scored the one which put the Cubs on the winning end of a thirteen-inning battle.

Had the former boss of the Sox sure would have a difficult time explaining the absence of Evers and the very much presence of Downs upon any proposition save that of luck.

The fans who watched that third battle between the Cubs and the Pilgrims know that it was a desperately fought one. In the seventh the Pilgrims started a batting rally and after tying the ten-inning lead Archer double attempted to go to second base on a sacrifice fly upon which a runner had already scored.

Leach shot the ball to Archer, who whipped it to Evers and the former Giant was out. But Devlin not only stepped on the Trojan's toe, but he also bumped his knee. Knee, with the result that John could play no more. When it came time for the Trojan to go to bat Downs was up there and he immediately singled.

He came up again in the eighth with the run now needed to tie and a man on second, and pounded out a double to right. That put the West Siders on even terms with the visitors.

In the tenth, with a man on third and one run needed to win, Downs was handed a base on balls.

In the thirteenth Downs opened with a single, was sacrificed to second, went to third when Hendrix attempted to catch him napping off second and scored the winning run on the short fly of Tom Needham.

Now, that looks like much luck. Maybe Evers would have done just as well, but it isn't reasonable to suppose that he would. Both Hines and Tyler, the Pilgrims' mound southpaws. And it's generally figured in baseball that your left-hand batter doesn't like to hit against a southpaw pitcher and isn't as successful.

To top it off with, Evers wasn't injured lightly. He was moved after the game and one would never have imagined that he was compelled to retire on account of injuries.

Jones would surely have some difficulty in explaining why the Cubs didn't play in luck when Evers was injured just badly enough to make it necessary for him to give way to a fellow who drove in the run that made extra innings necessary and also caused the run which made it possible for the Cub fans to start homeward after the interesting inning with an exceedingly good taste in the mouth. The taste that follows victory.

Gidney Injured, May Now Drop Athletics

Herbert A. Gidney, a member of the American Olympic team four years ago and who won laurels for the team in the high jump, has probably jumped his last jump. Gidney wrenched his knee a brief while ago and the injury appears to have made it impossible for him to again be numbered among the athletic stars. Besides, Gidney is taking up so much of his time training in the business world that it is doubtful if he ever again tries athletic training for the big events.

Manager Stovall Draws Suspension

WASHINGTON, July 20.—George Stovall, manager of the St. Louis American League baseball team, was notified here today that he had been suspended indefinitely by Dan Johnson, president of the league, as a result of the latter's agreement with Umpire Westervelt on Wednesday.

The Making of a Pretty Girl

A Cure for Scrawniness

By MARGARET HUBBARD AYER

ONCE upon a time there was a girl who thought she was too tall, and it worried her a great deal.

When she was about thirteen she began to sprout just like Alice in Wonderland, after she had eaten of the growing side of the mushroom, and she grew, and grew, and grew until she thought there was nobody in the whole world who was so tall as she was or who possessed such very long legs and arms and such long hands and feet. She asked her best friends if there wasn't something that would keep her from growing any taller, and she was quite sure she was going to be a giant or monstrosity of some kind.

Her family made such fun of her height that she became horribly self-conscious, and when I first knew her she was just about as awkward as any girl could be, for nothing will make you as gawky as the ridicule of your own family.

"You are certainly the human giraffe," jeered her elder brother, and at dancing school she was called the animated grasshopper. Naturally she didn't improve any, under this kindly admonition, but grew more awkward and ungainly day by day, and in the secrecy of her own room she shed bitter tears of mortification over her size and general length of limb.

Miss Katherine Kaelred in two beautiful poses.

I think she would have developed into one of the angular, thin and gawky girls we see so many of, if a kindly old aunt had not taken her in hand. This dear old lady was a natural encourager, and instead of telling the lanky girl how awkward she was, and how ridiculous she looked when she stooped in trying to hide her height, she praised her, telling her what a splendid thing it was to be tall and strong, and how proud the girl should be of her size. It took a long time before the girl learned to stand up straight, instead of crouching in a vain effort to look small, and much patience and perseverance was expended in training her to use her arms and hands naturally and gracefully.

This girl was also much too thin, and she seemed to be all angles and elbows. She had never had a good appetite and she had generally indulged in the wrong kind of food for one of her build. Now she was encouraged to take a glass of milk between meals in the morning, in the afternoon and before going to bed. She ate plenty of cereals and all the starchy, sweet vegetables, such as potatoes, peas, corn and beans, as well as salads, and rich fruits like bananas. Cream soups, macaroni and spaghetti, puddings and other substantial food formed part of her daily bill of fare, and this regimen, with the encouraging flattery of the old aunt, soon began to turn the angles into curves. Rooling that, after her daily bath, which was in warm water and not cold, she was told to rub herself with oil, a pure olive oil scented with lemon verbena, having been prepared for her and kept in a cool place.

Take all tall, thin girls, this one needed plenty of rest and eight hours' sleep, with an extra nap in the middle of the day, soon made a great change in her personal appearance. Her morning coffee was taken away from her and green tea was decided, but instead of that plenty of cheese cake was supplied. Fat sweets such as dates and figs, especially the former, instead of candy.

Where there is no chronic trouble, the girl who is all too thin, nine times out of ten, can trace much of her physical ailment to a worrying disposition. You can worry yourself thin even quicker than getting thin by diet or drugs. The thin girl is usually overconscientious and overenergetic, and naturally she cannot acquire flesh as long as she is overdoing physically.

I am dwelling on the thin girl's troubles because usually the very tall girl is the very thin one, and the tall girl will never become really graceful until she adds to her weight or begins to think of herself not as a skinny hatrack of bones, but as a generously padded and well proportioned person.

Physical grace is not acquired by any rules out of books, but by a study of the art of beauty and motion in other people, in art, and especially in those graceful persons whom we see on the stage, and who personify all that is beautiful and gracious.

The awkward, thin girl cannot do better than to take as a model some woman whose physique is the ideal of her own slim figure. The actress has studied the art of motion and knows how to make the best of herself. The length of limb which worries the awkward girl is an added beauty when it is mastered and dominated by grace.

One of these ideals is personified in the statuesque person of Miss Katherine Kaelred, whose beautiful arms and hands are the despair of her imitators. The grace with which she moves them is a study in itself. She is a very tall and regal woman and her arms are long and her hands have long, slender fingers. For many years Miss Kaelred practiced this exercise, which is one of the very best for limbering the wrist and arm:

"Hold the arm out from the shoulder, the hand stretched out, placing the fingers on an imaginary bar, raise the wrist without moving the fingers; now lower the wrist, still keeping the fingers on the same spot. At first it is well to place the fingers on a firm base, a shelf or even the back of a high chair will do. In raising the wrist raise it as if from the shoulder, and lower it the same way. Don't raise the wrist from the elbow. Raise the wrist with a long, undulating movement, almost a sinuous movement."

Some of Miss Kaelred's rules are worth remembering by the tall girl:

"Never try to look shorter than you are. Be proud of your height.

"Don't forget what a large woman must be stately and slow of motion.

"Cultivate repose."

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

"I THINK it is just grand the way our boys cleaned up over in Sweden," said the Manicure Lady to the Head Barber. "Brother Wilfred was so worked up about it that he wrote an ode to our Olympic heroes. It went like this:

"Oh, noble athletes, picked by Uncle Sam,
After a lot of most judicious weeding
You went across the pond in all your strength
And gained a lot of laurels in Stockholm, Sweden.

"You won the pole vault and the running jump
In other events no nation could pursue you,
I think that any man would be a chump
To think that athletes anywhere could do you."

"How many times have I got to tell you that your brother is a plain bug?" said the Head Barber. "His never wrote no poetry. Think of a poet making a rhyme like 'weeding' and 'Sweden.' I don't know none too much about making verses, but I know something about rhymes, because our rhetoric teacher at school used to tell us what rhymes was. She said that wasn't anything like a good rhyme or a bad rhyme. She said that a rhyme was either a rhyme or it wasn't one. She said that them song writers that rhymes 'home' with 'alone' was just as much to blame as a man that rhymed 'range' with 'cook stove.'"

"I never knew that you went to school that long," said the Manicure Lady, plainly awed by George's unexpected demonstration of knowledge. "Maybe you are less of a bonehead than I ever gave you credit of being, George. It just goes to show that one can never tell for sure who is thick in the skull and who isn't. Just to think that a man of your general appearance ever had a rhetoric teacher!"

"I had more teachers," said the Head Barber, rather loftily. "I studied algebra, too. I had a fine algebra teacher. She taught me a lot of algebra."

"What is algebra, George?" asked the Manicure Lady, now thoroughly impressed.

"It's all about them X's and Y's and Z's explained the Head Barber. "If there is a problem that you can't do by arithmetic, you have got to do it by algebra. X is always the unknown quantity, or whatever they call it. You have all the time got to find out what X is. Then you have to show what Y stands for, and then you know the answer. For instance, X equals fat, Y equals impudence, and X plus Y equals you."

"You think you are awful wise, don't you, George?" snorted the Manicure Lady. "As the poet would say, you're the guy that ended the storm in brainstorm. You make me tired, with all your claims of knowledge."

"You've got me wrong if you think I am intellectual," replied the Head Barber. "I'm not a smart man. I'm a bad man. I'm the man that put the first sin into Cincinnati."

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX

JUNE 8.—The following letter came in the mail this morning. I suppose I should tear it up or burn it. But a man doesn't follow the precedent established by fiction.

I will paste it in your friendly pages, then. It may be viewed in the light of an extenuating circumstance when the future has made complete revelation of my folly.

It is dated ten days ago. Evidently Josephine, for it is from her, deliberated long before sending it:

My Dear Max—I am fully aware that the size of my handwriting is distasteful to you. I am also aware that it will be more distasteful when you have read this letter. For in it I intend to tell you many things which it will be for your good to know.

Being a man, your greatest and prevailing characteristic is conceit. You are so blinded by it that not once in this unfortunate affair of ours have you put any blame on yourself.

You have laid it on my shoulders. And yet you are old enough to be my father. You have taken much credit to yourself for your greater wisdom. You do not know that this wisdom is not due to your brain. It is due to what the difference in years has taught you. Of this you may be sure. When I am twice my present age I will be as much wiser.

But were you as wise at twenty as I? I doubt it! I know what was the best for me. It was to win you for a husband. When you were twenty you did not know what was best for you. If you had known you would have married Mary Playter. She loved you, and you loved her. But you thought best to make a fortune first. Though there was no tact understanding, she was waiting for you.

And you thought with a great complacency that she would make a sensible wife, and congratulated yourself on your good sense in choosing her.

But that was many years ago. As you grew older and accumulated money she grew older also and plainer in your money-tainted eyes. You began to think she was too old for you. Too staid, too sedate, and not showy enough. You wanted a wife who would look well on parade. You wanted a YOUNG wife, believing your wealth entitled you to that as it entitled you to the handsomest furniture and the finest horses.

Then You Met Me

When in this mood you met me. If you had any fault to find with me it was that I was more than sixteen. In your eyes every year on a woman's shoulders is a fault, and every year on the shoulders of a man is another virtue. I won you by being a hypocrite. I lost you through telling the truth!

I claimed to be a mistress of every domestic art because you practiced your admiration for the housewifely woman. I represented myself to be a devoted daughter to meet your demands that a girl be a slave to her household. I practiced every deceit, every hypocrisy, with the end in view of winning you. And I won!

And all the time you were priding yourself on your marvelous insight into human nature. "No woman," you said many times during our courtship, "could fool me."

And I would cuddle up close to you and say, "That's so, dear Max," and all the time I was fooling you in a manner apparent to every one in the world but you!

Your friends didn't like me because they knew what a hypocrite I was. They had a discernment you lacked, yet all the time you were holding your own judgment above theirs.

You were a tempting prize, which is my only excuse for deceit. But I claim it is a better excuse than that which you can offer. I was willing to sell myself for your wealth. You were willing to buy.

Who is the more guilty? Is it not the one who, being older, should be wiser? Is a daughter expected to be as wise as her father? And you were old enough to fill that relation with me.

You refused to let me have the good time my inclinations demanded with those of my own age. You thought I should prefer an evening spent in kissing your bald spot to an evening spent in dancing with those of my own years!

You would make me over, but you saw no reason for making any alterations in your own perfect self.

I am a pretty girl. I know it as well as I know this is a pretty day. I dress in good taste, and when I sat in your car and ran it I made a handsome picture, fitting for your social position and your prosperity.

Won by Deceit

I looked to be a much better match for you than Mary Playter looked when she drove that old family horse and sat in a shabby-looking buggy filled with children. But she would have been safer for you. I knew that. Your friends knew it. She knew it. You may think you know it now, but if she were back on earth, and you had your choice again, I doubt if it would be she.

You dispute that? But I know you better than you know yourself. Will you dispute THAT statement?

I won you in deceit. I lost you in honesty. You asked me to choose between yourself and Mr. Dribbles. I was honest for the first time since I had known you. I said I preferred Mr. Dribbles. And instead of approving me for that frankness, you despised me for it.

And you despised me because it was a blow to your pride!

All the time I have been going with Mr. Dribbles I have known of his love for one of my best friends. I have encouraged him in his struggle to win her. I have aided him in a correspondence with her, to which her parents objected. And I will be the sole attendant at their wedding. Which will occur next week.

Mr. Dribbles likes me because he sees my faults, and knows I have a few virtues. He knows I am mercenary. It is a characteristic of the American man.

I write this, as I said, for your own good. You are a prize in the matrimonial market. You are also as blind as a bat. The next time a woman tells you she loves you, tell her you are penniless. If you had told that to me our engagement wouldn't have lasted as long.

I return the will you made in my favor. Also the engagement ring. After much deliberation I have decided that even the glitter of gold would not compensate me for the role of hypocrite I would have to sustain in living with you.

JOSEPHINE.

Safe Hints

It's usually much easier for a man's own friends to get the best of him than it is for his enemies.

It takes a woman to tell other women how she trusts her husband, just so it she really did.

If a book bores you it's an easy matter to shut it on—but it's different with a human bore.

THE DREAMS OF GLADYS

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON had neglected one Saturday night recently to lay in a supply of magazines for Sunday reading. And on Sunday morning it poured so he was unable to go out and get any.

He read his Sunday paper. Then, looking around hungrily for something to read, he picked up a book which his wife thought the best book ever written. It was entitled "The Dreams of Gladys."

When Mrs. Appleton called him to dinner at 1 o'clock she found him reading "The Dreams of Gladys," and rejoiced.

"His taste in reading is improving," she suspected to Daysey Mayme. "I am sure if all wives left their favorite novels lying around, their husbands would read them, and get the inspiration the women used in communing with their ideals in the books."

Lysander John ate his dinner in silence, putting olive oil in his coffee and sugar on his cucumbers. There was a glare in his eye that would have alarmed most people.

"He is experiencing the soul-uplift of the book," thought Mrs. Appleton. "He has just about reached the chapter where Gladys slips away from her husband to glide barefoot across the lawn at midnight that she may get in tune with the infinite."

After dinner Lysander John returned to his reading. His wife returned to the kitchen, where she hurried through her work that she might join her husband and discuss with him the true inwardness of her favorite book.

She reached the parlor just as Lysander John had finished "The Dreams of Gladys." He gave a loud yell as she entered the room. Throwing the book on the floor, he sprang at her, grabbed her by the hair, and dragged her to her bedroom, where he tried to cut her throat with a hair brush.

He had gone mad trying to get in tune with his wife's literary ideals!

It required five men to hold him all night, but toward morning he was so much quieter their vigilance was relaxed. Escaping from them, he entered the parlor.

Here his eyes fell on "The Dreams of Gladys" lying on the floor. It was necessary on his occasion to give him morphine.

"There is no use," sobbed Mrs. Appleton, collecting her favorite novels and hiding them out of sight, "in trying to elevate the men!"

Jones came up to town one morning with a bruised and swollen forehead. His friend Briggs showed considerable curiosity as to the cause of the injury.

"How did it happen, old man?" he asked.

"Collided with the hat-rack last night," said Jones, shortly.

"Accidentally?" asked Briggs.

"No, Briggs," replied Jones, sweetly, "I have every reason to suspect that it attacked me purposely!"

The Perfection of Practice

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Come you?" said I; then I sighed, and Then I gazed upon her sweetly,
For I think I do this sort of thing parties
Very neatly."

AND that is just what no girl wants —a lover who sighs, and adores, and pays compliments, and flatters himself that he "does this sort of thing particularly neatly."

She doesn't want a practised lover! She doesn't want a man to come to her with every lesson learned. She wants to teach him.

And that is a boy that very few women have. The men who pay compliments easily and gracefully are unfortunately the kind of men who get the opportunity to pay them often.

They are the kind who are most in the company of women, and it is their flattery and the ease with which they pay it that does so much in turning the heads of the very young girls just at the time when it is most important that their heads should be set on straight.

They are smooth, and easy and graceful. They handle a love phrase or a compliment as easily as they handle the fork, and many of them began handling both at the same immature age.

The ease with which they compliment; the knowledge born of experience that tells them just what kind of a compliment will have the finest entering wedge, means trouble to every girl who believes them.

Their compliments are so easy to pay they are paid without sincerity. The tongue has become so adept at "this sort of thing" that it utters compliments that are born on the tongue's edge, and that never came from the heart.

Ease in love making is the mark of love that should put the girl to whom it is made on her guard. Better a tongue-tied lover; better a lover who stammers and halts and can't find the right word, and so uses the wrong one or says nothing; better such a lover than the lover who is glib.

If a man pays few compliments and those are lame and halt and awkward, note to his credit, I say, than if he has a tool constantly oscillated at his tongue's end ready to march out and capture any little feminine heart that flies by.

No girl wants insincerity in her lover. She has sent it to her friends, which is a misfortune. To meet it in a lover is a tragedy. Therefore, I beg of her that she place not a large value on a love phrase or a compliment that is the perfection of grace.

That means practice. And practice in such affairs means insincerity.

It is not the cream of the love she is getting. It is the skimmed milk, and a skimmed milk that has been on the fire many times.

A Mysterious Disappearance — One of the Greatest Detective Stories Ever Written — By Gordon Holmes

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

"HOW can you dare to detain me?" she shrieked, and the glint in her eyes showed how thoroughly her passions were aroused.

"You can separate from me if you will, I shall not venture to hinder you. But I swear you shall not do this fiendish act without my knowledge. I tell you you must remain here. Where you leave this house you do so in my company."

"And why am I to be kept a prisoner?" "Mrs. Hillmer will return in less than an hour. You have sought this meeting yourself. Very well. You shall have it. When your charges have been thoroughly thrashed out in the presence of Mrs. Hillmer and myself, I will then accompany you where you will, and leave you under the protection of your sister, or any one else you choose, should you still persist in leaving me.

Of course my action was unwise to the last degree. But remember, Claude, that during these last awful five minutes I had seen a side of my wife's nature hidden from me six long years. And I was a man suddenly plunged into a raging sea, drifting helplessly. I knew not whither. All that consumed me was a wild desire for such scant justice as I deserved. I had erred, but my faults were not those my wife alleged against me.

If she was angry before, she was now absolutely uncontrollable.

"What?" she screamed. "Remain to meet your—your mistress? Never, while I have life!"

She flung herself upon me so suddenly that she tore me way from the door. She was a strong and athletic woman, and I suppose she expected some resistance, for she used such force as to drag me forward into the middle of the room, overturning a chair in the effort. I was so utterly taken by surprise that I yielded to her violence more completely than she expected.

She staggered, let go her hold and fell heavily backward, tripping over the fallen chair. I made a desperate attempt to save her, but only caught the end of a fur necklet, and it tore like a spider's web.

Lady Dyke's Death

Her body crashed against a Venetian fender, and her head came with awful force against a sort of support for the fire irons that stood up a foot from the ground.

Then she rolled over, her eyes and face undergoing a ghastly change, and instantly became, as I thought, unconscious.

I knelt beside her, raising her head with my right hand, and hoarsely besought her to speak to me, when I would at once do anything she demanded. But she gave no sign of animation. In a frenzy of despair I forced myself to examine her injuries, and my heart nearly stopped beating when I discovered that a large piece of iron had been driven into her brain through the back of her head.

I knew in a moment that she was dead. Although I have not had much experience of that terrible speech in the human being, I had seen far too much of death in animal life not to know that she who had been my honored and respected wife now lay before me a mere soulless entity—a symbol only of the splendid vital creature who, a minute earlier, was angrily protesting against the supposed faithlessness of her mate.

Looking back now upon the events of that fateful night, I marvel at the appalling coolness which came to my aid as soon as I realized the extent of the misfortune which had befallen both Alice and myself. I can fully understand what is meant by the callousness of a certain class of criminals, or the indifference to inevitable death betrayed by Eastern races. No sooner was I quite assured that my wife was dead—dead beyond hope or doubt—than I regained the use of my reasoning faculties in the most marvellously cold-blooded degree.

The actual difficulties of my position were enormous. I arraigned myself before the judge and jury, and I saw clearly that every circumstance which contributed to Alice's suspicion in the first instance was now magnified a hundred-fold by the manner and scene of her death.

Before me, in ghostly panorama, moved the dread crowd of witnesses against me, the degradation of my family, the bitter and vengeful feelings of my wife's relatives, the suffering of poor, unconscious Mrs. Hillmer, the whole avalanche of horror and misery which this unfortunate accident had precipitated upon every person who claimed my relationship or friendship.

My mental attitude was quite altruistic. Could I have undone the past, I would cheerfully have undergone a painful and protracted death forthwith.

LIFTING THE LID AT REVERE BEACH — Mr. Nick Young, the eminent Dramatic Critic, and Mr. Moynahan, the distinguished Colorado Artist, turn the spotlight on some of the things that happen at the seaside, exclusively in SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

HOW LADY DYKE DIED.

"I knew in a moment that she was dead."
(Alexander Clarke of "The Wall Street Girl" Company, as Dyke.)

But no possible abatement on my part of the fact that our laundry work was would restore Alice to life. I knew it was quite impossible that I should be convicted of murdering her, strong as the circumstantial testimony against me must be. The more legal consequences did not, however, weigh with me for a second. From that awful hour I felt that I was doomed personally. My only thought was to seek oblivion, not only for myself, but for all whom Alice's death might affect.

Reasoning in this way, I rapidly resolved to make a bold effort to conceal forever the time and place of the fatality. If I failed I could tell the truth; if I succeeded, I might, at my own expense, save a vast amount of unnecessary sorrow.

The desperate expedient came to me of carrying off the body to the untenanted house at Putney where my old master had resided until his death, utilizing the four-wheeled cab with its half-drunken driver for the purpose.

If I reached Putney unhindered, I could dispose of my terrible burden easily, for the river flowed past the grounds and every inch of the locality was known to me.

It occurred to me that perhaps the body might be found and recognized. Our personal linen was never marked by reason

I knelt beside my poor wife's body once more, and with great difficulty took off her costume and loosely fastened on the maid's garments.

In her purse there were some bulky documents, which I afterwards discovered to be the reports furnished by a firm of private detectives, detailing all my movements with reference to Raleigh Mansions with surprising accuracy. But she had concealed her name. These men themselves only knew me as "Colonel Montgomery."

How Alice first came to suspect me I can only guess. Perhaps my indifference, my absence from home at definite hours, a chance meeting in the street, unknown to me—any of these may have supplied the initial cause, and led her to verify her doubts before taxing me with my supposed iniquity.

The Maid's Clothes

Her maid was of a similar build to my wife, so I hastened to the girl's room, and laid hands upon a soiled coat and skirt which were relegated to the recesses of the wardrobe.

I glanced at my watch as I came along the corridor. It was 6:15 p. m. All the incidents I have related to you had happened within a quarter of an hour. Oh, heaven! it seemed longer than all the preceding years of my life.

Having resolved upon a line of conduct, I pursued it with the sang-froid and accuracy of one of the superior scoundrels delineated by Du Boisgobey. The door of the flat was locked. If the servants, bloody due yet, returned unexpectedly, I would send them off to Victoria Station on some imaginary errand of their mistress.

Two men have been arrested in Vienna for smuggling saccharin into Austria with the involuntary assistance of twenty performing cats. The cats arrived at the frontier in a large cage, and, after being inspected, were passed as being destined for a Viennese music hall. A message was afterwards received from the German customs inspectors to examine the cage closely. This was done when the animals arrived in Vienna, and a large quantity of saccharin was found concealed under the false floor of the cage.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

Stock Trading Is Stagnant on All the 'Changes

By W. H. ROSS.

W. H. ROSS

STATE STREET, July 20.—There was not enough action to the Boston market today to definitely define its tendency whether up and down. It was rather firm at the start and later became irregular. Dullness was its chief characteristic. Trading was apathetic in New York, too.

During the morning Granby, Miami and Mason Valley sold lower, and Copper Range and Osceola declined more than either. There were gains for Butte & Superior and a few other issues. A number of usually active ones were unchanged.

The expected notification of an advance in the price of wire and wire products has been sent out by the American Steel and Wire Company. The advance is $1 a ton and goes into effect on Monday. It makes the quotation for plain wire 1.45c. a pound and for wire nails 1.65c a pound.

New York Market Quiet.

There was a lull in trading in the New York market, most brokers being in a waiting mood. Speculative interest at the opening centred around Erie common and Amalgamated. Each went ⅛ higher. Erie preferred made a gain at the start, but did not hold it. Steel opened lower. Lehigh Valley advanced while Reading declined. There were fractional gains for a number of important issues, but price changes were narrow and the volume of business small. The early weakness of Canadian Pacific was attributed to selling in London, where the trading was about all professional. American stocks were firm there and regarded in a cheerful mood. Business was very dull in London as well as at the Continental houses.

There was light trading on the New York curb, but the tone of that market was steady.

Latest About Copper Metal.

The price of electrolytic copper has practically got back in actual selling to the 17⅝ cents a pound basis. The latest sales reported were at 17.645 cents. "The strength of the situation," the New York Sun says, "may be all the more appreciated when it is known that the seller of copper at this price a fortnight ago bought small tonnages at 16½ cents cash New York. Copper producers are today the most pleased body of men in the city and they each and every one said 'I told you so' when asked yesterday to express their opinion on current conditions."

In the copper trade it is believed that a revival of buying for October, November and December will begin next week.

That mining has been profitable at the prices recently obtained for the metal is demonstrated in a Thompson, Towle & Co. statement, which reads: "Twenty-two copper mining companies have this year paid $18,000,000 in dividends, and since incorporation these companies have paid a total of $350,000,000, as compared with a total capitalization of $220,000,000. Calumet & Hecla leads with total dividends paid of $117,000,000. Anaconda has paid $61,245,000, while Utah Copper Company is the second largest dividend payer this year, following Anaconda with disbursements of $3,750,000, and has paid out $14,451,000 since its incorporation."

A special to the Financial News Bureau says that operations at the North Kearsarge mine of the Osceola Consolidated had to be suspended yesterday because No. 4 shaft was flooded by water supposed to come from a nearby dam. Last evening the water was 4,000 feet deep and running into other shafts stopped work throughout the mine.

Financial News in Brief.

The New York American says: "Much speculation is indulged in here concerning the underlying relations between Germany and Britain. The warnings voiced by certain financial authorities in London have caused some misgiving, although New York international bankers will not admit any knowledge of a threatened crisis."

It is said that gross earnings of the Erie road for June were slightly in excess of those for the same month in 1911. But the coal strike will considerably cut the fiscal year total.

The statement by the United States Steel Corporation for the second quarter will be published on July 30, and it is generally expected that net earnings will be in the neighborhood of $25,000,000. It is thought by some forecasters that the figures for the third or present quarter will be more than $30,000,000. The earnings of this quarter and the last one will reflect the advances in the price of steel products.

It is said in Philadelphia that in defiance of the Supreme Court dissolution order, the "Tobacco trust" has arranged to take over the business of the Frishmuth Bros. & Co., incorporated, of Philadelphia, the largest independent concern of its kind in America. It is said that the books and records of this concern have already been transferred to the Lorillard plant in Jersey City, from which, it is understood, Frishmuth brands will hereafter be shipped. The Frishmuth concern practically controlled the fine-cut tobacco trade in this country.

Representative Levy of New York wants Congress to provide for an international note system to expedite foreign business and aid travelers. His bill would have the U. S. Treasury issue currency indorsed with monetary value in the unit of Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, German Empire, Great Britain, Greece, Netherlands, Italy, Portugal, Russia, Spain, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland.

The Interstate Commerce Commerce investigating into rates on cement, iron ore, iron and steel, will take in the territory east of the Mississippi and north of the Potomac and Ohio rivers, and covers the Steel Trust's roads.

It is reported in Chicago that mining interests in Central Illinois are to be merged and that Francis S. Peabody, who is directing plans, is acting for the Commonwealth Edison Company of that city, a corporation with a capital of $40,000,000. It is understood that a new Gary will be built at Kincaid, Ill., and that options have been obtained on all but three of the seventy coal mines in Sangamon, Christian and Montgomery counties.

It is said that Canadian roads inquired for 25,000 tons of rails in this country and found American mills so busy that the orders will have to be filled in Dominion plants, if at all.

Railroad equipment orders made public yesterday totalled 7,200 cars, which will call for about 75,000 tons of steel. Consumers are paying manufacturers $1, $2 and $3 a ton as premiums for prompt delivery of structural steel and plates.

The twenty-nine railroads owned or controlled by the United States Steel Corporation have been operating at a profit. The Bessemer and Lake Erie road paid 150 per cent. in dividends last year and the Duluth and Iron Range 155.

The increase in marine insurance rates is not surprising when the losses report of London Lloyds for the first half of the year is examined. Shipwrecks cost underwriters $25,157,544 in six months. The sinking of the Titanic was not the only disaster. The number of vessels wrecked is 127.

One grain trade authority estimates that the total grain crop of this country for this year will exceed those of last year by 625,000,000 bushels, and that corn and oats will represent 550,000,000 of the gain.

It is said in Cleveland that Standard Oil interests are going to build a large number of steel oil carrying ships for Panama Canal trade, but this is denied at No. 26 Broadway.

The interests of railroad magnates in Alaska is increasing. President Brown of the New York Central intends to visit that vast northern territory before he returns from the western journey he began last night.

J. H. Coleman, manager of the Franco-American Bank of Paris says: "There is no doubt but that just now the American money market is the cheapest in the world, and American bankers virtually control at the present moment the European money market."

ANOTHER TELLS OF MURDER AUTO

question Jack Rose. Rose was a former partner of Rosenthal, and it was believed he had hired the car which bore the murderers.

Word was sent to Rose, and he came to the station and gave himself up.

Talks of "gangs," "gun-men" and other underworld phenomena has dotted the investigation. Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty was indignant at a hint that he was not thoroughly familiar with the dark and devious ways of underworld characters.

"I know every one of these persons," he said. "I defy any man to prove that I don't. There is not a man connected with this case with whose accuser, habits and haunts I am not familiar, and they know it."

The case has thrown an amazing light upon modern police methods. Instead of the conventional idea of patrolmen scouring the city, peering into dives and working out clews, we have a picture of police heads sitting at headquarters, their heels upon a desk.

"We ought to talk to so and so about this affair," says one.

"All right," says another. "Bill, go telephone him I want to see him."

The question behind it is:

Why are the gangmen willing to give themselves up at a suggestion or command from headquarters? Is it in confidence—or in fear?

At any rate here are the most recent results of the five days' investigation:

Price on Rosenthal.

The district attorney has learned that $2,000 was the price on Rosenthal's life. In spite of this liberal payment, Louis Libby says the men didn't pay their $50 automobile bill, and Rose—"Jack" Rose, who hired the car—may be sued for the amount.

Police Lieutenant Becker, against whom Rosenthal had made sensational charges, before his assassination, has been relieved of the command of a part of his strong arm squad, and is now doing clerical duty at headquarters. Police Commissioner Waldo is keeping the man under surveillance, and at hand where he may be had if wanted.

William J. Burns and his detectives have entered the case. There are even rumors that dictagraphs are concealed behind the bars in the cells of Libby, Shapiro and Jack Rose, now in the Tombs. At any rate, five Burns men were in the District Attorney's office when he questioned Libby and Shapiro and got a new version of the killing, and it is rumored that Mr. Whitman and Burns himself were in conference in the latter's secret apartments in New York city.

Whitman has secured the services of these detectives through private subscription, it is said. Mr. Whitman also has secured the name of a well known gambler, not now in New York's jurisdiction, who is ripe to tell many things about the interweaving of gambling and police in New York.

George Richards, a former miner, has told District Attorney Whitman that he witnessed the shooting of Rosenthal and that the police did not make any effort to pursue the assassins until their automobile had disappeared. He said the chauffeur and one other man remained in the car while two others did the shooting, one standing on either side of the entrance of the Metropole and a third behind these two as a sort of outpost, evidently to guard against interference by outsiders.

When these three men boarded the car after the shooting, one held a pistol to the chauffeur's head, as if to force him to make all possible speed. Two policemen in front of the Metropole, according to Richards, seemed so confused after the shooting that they did not know what to do.

Shapiro Tells Story.

Shapiro's story of the details of the killing, told for the first time, is an interesting account of the leisurely methods of modern and up-to-date assassins.

Shapiro told the story to District Attorney Whitman and a group of Burns detectives.

"I am innocent, so help me God," he said, his face working with emotion. "I had no more idea that my car was going to be used for murder than I thought I was going to jump into the East River. Rose has been an old customer of ours. But he hasn't paid for Monday night's ride and we would like to have the $50."

"Libby, who knows nothing about this affair except what I have told him, has been a cabby around the boulevard for nearly twelve years with me. We have never been in any trouble. He never did harm to a soul.

"Lots of times we have driven for some pretty tough boys, but nothing worse than a beating up ever came of these trips. The police have got nothing on us.

OLD STATE HOUSE AFIRE? ASK MAHONEY

A lighted cigarette tossed through a grating above one of the basement windows of the Old State House, set fire to some waste paper, causing a little smoke. Patrolman Thomas Mahoney, who is said to have a great love for the historic structure, saw the smoke and rang in an alarm. Before the fire engines had reached the scene, however, a newsboy had stuck his foot down through the grating and extinguished the flame.

Last Call in Style Contest

$5 AWAITS HER

If You Find Your Photograph There Come In and Get $5.

The last of the Boston shoppers' "style" pictures will be printed in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

A whole page of pictures—and everyone worth $5—will be the finale of this interesting gathering of evidence to prove the truth or falsity of the charge that Boston's women dress like "frumps."

Any woman who has been shopping in Boston on the first three days of this week, last week or the week before had better order a copy of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN and look through the page of pictures.

The net result of the three weeks' search by the AMERICAN'S photographers has proved that, as far as style is concerned, Boston women do not fall behind any city in the country. The great majority of the women whose pictures have been printed have called at the Promotion Department and received $5 reward each.

The originals of some of the pictures have yet to call and the AMERICAN requests that they do so as soon as possible.

Look for the page of pictures in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN, and if you find your picture there, call at the American Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop square, dressed as in the picture and you will be given $5.

That's the whole story—and the end of the story.

If your picture appears, come in and get the money.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Now that the Tacoma and Old Orchard race meets have become history, only one big event remains before the running of the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races in the Fall. This is the Galveston Cotton Carnival meet, August 8, 9 and 10, on the famous beach at Galveston, Texas. That city is becoming better known each year as the "Summer resort of the Southwest."

The races are to be run over a comparatively short course on the beach this season—two and one-half miles—making a full lap five miles. This will insure the cars passing the grandstand at frequent intervals. In former years the chief criticism of the Ormond-Dayton course, about twenty miles in length, was that it was too long for the races to be exciting.

The Berkeshire Automobile Club has taken a new step to help out the motorist who travels dangerous roads by night. The club has had painted large white diamonds, 6x4 feet, and sets them up at either end of a bridge or near a dangerous turn in a road. The white diamonds are visible at night and serve as an effective warning to the driver. The plan has, it is understood, proved to be so satisfactory that the club is going to seek active co-operation in extending the use of this safeguard.

SOUTH END FIRE KILLS 14 HORSES

Fourteen horses were burned to death and damage estimated at $7,000 was caused by a fire which wrecked the livery stable at No. 75 Northampton street, South End, early today.

The cause of the fire is a mystery, and an investigation will probably be made.

Occupants of several adjoining tenement houses fled to the street, some taking their valuables with them. The wind threatened to spread the fire to adjoining dwellings, and a second alarm was sounded.

The fire was discovered by Patrolman E. P. Ryan. It had apparently been burning for some time in the three-story brick structure.

The horses which were burned to death were on the second floor. They were dead by the time the firemen got into the building. A number of wagons and carriages, kept on the first floor, were destroyed.

The building is owned by the Priest estate and the stable was conducted by John Q. Condon.

CARUSO TO RECEIVE $7,000 EVERY NIGHT

LONDON, July 20.—A London newspaper announces that Caruso has just signed a contract to sing at the National Opera House in Buenos Ayres for at least twelve performances at $7,000 each.

For years Caruso has been the highest paid tenor in the world, and since 1907 he has not averaged less than $2,500 a performance. In that year he made a contract with the late Heinrich Conreid, by which he was to sing nine months each year for four years, for $300,000. He agreed to sing eight times a month. Previous to that time he got less than $2,000 a performance.

If he is to receive $7,000 an appearance in Buenos Ayres it is more than twice what he has received for an operatic appearance before.

This Country Built the Canal, PAID FOR IT, Owns It and Will Manage It

Suggestions from England and Elsewhere Will Be Politely Received. And This Country Will Do as IT Thinks Best With Its Own Property

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

We published Thursday the text of an interview given by W. R. Hearst to the London Evening Standard.

This interview gave the English people, in one of their own newspapers, some needed insight into American views and intentions concerning the Panama Canal, and the somewhat amusing effort of England to tell the people of this country WHAT THEY ARE TO DO WITH THEIR OWN PROPERTY.

The fact is, as Mr. Hearst tells the English newspaper, that the Panama Canal is not, as our English friends would have it, a public highway open to everybody, BUT A DOMESTIC POSSESSION OF THE UNITED STATES, CREATED BY THE UNITED STATES, PAID FOR BY THE UNITED STATES AND OWNED BY THE UNITED STATES.

The money of this country raised by taxes upon all of the people built that canal. Hundreds of millions of dollars are going into construction—EVERY DOLLAR AN AMERICAN DOLLAR.

Many other millions will be spent for fortifying and for maintaining the canal.

The United States OWNS the Panama Canal, just as England owns Fleet street—or the Manchester Ship Canal.

The people of the world will profit by the construction of the canal. Millions will be saved to all of the nations in shorter trips around the world and shorter journeys from ocean to ocean.

The hundreds of millions that this country has spent will AND MUST do good to every nation that sends ships to sea.

Uncle Sam did not go among the nations with his hat in his hand asking for money to build that canal. He did not say, as he might have said, "You will all be made richer by the canal, every one of your ships will be made more valuable because it will be able to do more work, so pay your share."

Uncle Sam built the canal and paid for it. And now comes England suggesting that this government has no right to permit its own ships to go through the canal free of toll.

That was all that the United States contemplated of an advantage—the right to allow American ships, our own boats, TO USE OUR OWN CANAL WITHOUT PAYING FOR THE PRIVILEGE.

If a man builds and owns a carriage or a road it is natural that he should permit his own children to use the road or the carriage without charge, that he should if he chose ask others to pay for the privilege.

That is what the United States government does. It will allow American ships to go through the canal free, or at a nominal rate—and all other ships of all other nations will pay a fair price for the use of the canal—as they pay a price now in the Suez Canal and other canals.

The English in their efforts to manage the great enterprise WHICH THIS COUNTRY CREATED appeals to a treaty abolished long ago and replaced by the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, which was drawn—thanks to the efforts of the Hearst newspapers.

In regard to the interpretation of the treaty Mr. Hearst, in his interview, says:

"An article in the London Times says a great deal depends upon the correct interpretation of the spirit in which the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was drawn; that is to say, as to how far it perpetuated the sense of the Clayton-Bulwer convention. In view of the above facts, it ought to be clear that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty only perpetuates the sense of the Clayton-Bulwer convention where it repeats the words of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty. When it does not repeat the words, it is, as I have said, because of a definite determination to reject the principle. Moreover, since that time the United States has acquired the territory across which the canal is built, which seems to me to have considerable bearing upon the situation and further to strengthen the claims of the United States in regard to the canal."

The American people will not listen patiently to any suggestion of control of the American canal by outside powers, English or others. And the American Senate will not give up this nation's right to control completely the two national doors which we have opened, East and West, and the lane of water which we have built across this continent from one ocean to the other.

England and the other nations will be treated fairly. But fair treatment of others does not imply unfair treatment of this country's citizens. Inasmuch as the citizens PAID FOR THE CANAL, TOOK ALL THE RISKS AND DID ALL THE WORK, THEY CAN IF THEY CHOOSE USE THE CANAL THAT THEY CREATED ON TERMS SUITABLE TO THEMSELVES.

It will not be forgotten, by the way, what part Theodore Roosevelt played in the construction of this canal and the acquisition of the territory necessary to its construction.

Whatever the individual opinion of Theodore Roosevelt's policies and actions may be, none can deny him the virtues of energy, determination and courage.

Roosevelt is the man whose energetic action and power to decide quickly gave us that strip across the continent, and gave to the world the great canal IN A HURRY.

And Roosevelt should have the credit.

Desperate Desmond—and 3 Heroes

How Claude Roosevelt Is Accidentally Discovered

1—THE CHASE. Hero Roosevelt urges the B. Moose to its best speed. Claude Taft and Claude Wilson are on his trail.

2—A PLOT. Claude Roosevelt resolves to hide in the pond, and thereby fool his pursuers.

3—DECEIVED. Heedless of the moose horns, which look like weeds, Heroes Wilson and Taft ride madly past the hidden Roosevelt.

4—DESMOND AT WORK. Desperate Desmond Prohibition, noticing the pond, thinks it a good time to refill the water wagon.

5—DISCOVERED. The water being taken from the pond, Claude Roosevelt is exposed to view, and Claude Wilson and Claude Taft have him cornered.

6—THE FAUNAL NATURALIST. Claude Roosevelt, when his hiding place is discovered, attempts to inveigle Claude Wilson into an argument on natural history. Claude Wilson, however, is familiar with the Bull Mosquito only, and won't argue. Monday we shall show the result of the honeyfugling.

What Would Happen if Husbands Were Frank?

Absolute Frankness Often Endangers the Happiness of Many Homes

By ADA PATTERSON.

"WOULDN'T you like to know what he thinks of you?" one woman asked another. They had been talking of a sphinx-like, and because silent, interest-provoking man. If he had talked much the spell would probably have been broken.

"No," replied the other, a note of alarm in her voice. "Not always."

Yet a little English woman, who recently married the grandson of the poet Longfellow, tempted the gods of discord by saying that the ideal husband is frank. Rash little woman who reckoned without moods!

Moods are mental weather. Sometimes the sun of the spirit shines gloriously, and at such times it is safe to be frank. The sunshine has irradiated and beautified the landscape of facts. But there be times when the sky is overcast. Perhaps this mood portends a downfall of rain, a rattling of verbal thunder and lightning. Or it may only be a temporary eclipse of the sun of good humor. But heaven spare us absolute frankness at these times!

There Are Certain Questions That Husbands Do Not Like

Maybe the little bride confused terms. What she wished to say may be, "The ideal husband is truthful." Certainly no normal woman wants lying answers to those ancient, honorable questions: "Where have you been?" and "Why are you late?" Husbands do not like these questions. They bore them. But the best husband believes they are one of the inescapable evils of married life, and he gives answer more or less truthful, to circumstances. The only man I know who had the hardihood to dispute his wife's right to ask these questions, disputed also his mother's, and he has been divorced, as he deserved.

Truthfulness may be construed as an accurate answering of questions put; frankness as the voluntary forcing of facts upon us. If the bridegroom acquired by the hardy spirited bride who has been quoted is truthful he will answer reluctantly when she says: "Do you think this frock is becoming?" "Not quite so becoming as the one you wore yesterday, dear." But if he is frank he won't wait for the question. He will say at breakfast—that trying meal which temperamental persons should eat alone—"What's the matter with that dress? You are looking worse than I ever saw you."

The Difference Between the Truthful and the Frank Husband

In ten years she may say: "I lost my fresh color when I came to America. I'm dreadfully pale. Don't you think so?" If he is merely truthful husband he will answer: "You are a little paler, dear. We must take a run down the coast to freshen you up." If he is a frank spouse he will not wait for questions, but will announce. "You're looking horribly faded. You're not nearly as pretty as you were when I married you." If the bride is as spirited as a wife I know, she will retort: "Do you suppose you are the handsome man I married?"

If he is simply truthful and she asks him if he thinks she has paid too much for a rug he will answer: "Maybe they did overcharge you." The frank man will exclaim: "There is no limit to your extravagance."

The truthful man, when begged to tell her whether she is becoming unbearable, answers, "Your nerves are a little upset, dear; you need rest." The frank man will rush into trouble with the remark: "If I had known what a bad temper you have I wouldn't have married you."

The truthful husband will answer the inevitable post-matrimonial question: "Do you love me as much as you used to do?" with "True love never changes." The frank man will not mince delicate matters. She will have an illusion when the conversation with him is ended, and he may have no wife.

It would be rather painful to know what people think of us at all times, their actual appreciement of us at the moment. Because of their mood, or ours, we might have a lower rating than we would have received yesterday, or than that we will get tomorrow.

The lightning flash of anger might show us ourselves in a way that we would never forgive the speaker, and would be hard pressed to excuse in ourselves. Moods are mighty, but their reign is blessedly short.

Blessed be the man who invented silence! In crises it has saved bloodshed and spared broken friendships.

Many Critical Situations Have Been Saved by Silence

Many a critical situation has been saved by enveloping it in the blessed veil of silence, for thoughts make no sound, and there is always hope that they may change.

Mark Twain inscribed on a photograph I have seen: "Truth is precious. Let us economize it." Doubtless he had suffered at the hands of some volunteer of unpleasantness who railed himself frank.

The world has some ugly, jagged rocks of fact. Life will be more beautiful if we screen their ugliness by planting flowers of consideration about them. We can at least refrain from brutality in the name of frankness.

Governor Bass Will Send a Fruitful Message Tomorrow to All the People of New England in His Capacity as Editor-in-Chief of the Sunday AMERICAN

IN the front rank of the little company of brainy, educated, honest young men—the group is all too small for the country's sake—who have come into the arena of American politics in recent years stands Robert P. Bass, the aggressive and progressive Governor of New Hampshire.

Tonight Governor Bass will be editor-in-chief of the Sunday AMERICAN.

Tomorrow what he writes will be read by a great multitude of people throughout New England. His words and his message will form material for comment in every town and hamlet of five great Commonwealths, of one of which he is himself the Chief Executive.

It is a great opportunity for a young leader like Governor Bass to be able from the chief editorial chair of this newspaper to address a concourse of thinking American citizens far larger than any audience that could be reached by any statesman in the days of Washington and Adams and Jefferson.

The Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow will shine with interesting matter. The most brilliant of all its features will be the editorial message which Governor Bass will send out through all these Eastern States.

Boston women are famous for their charities. Probably in no other city in the world are so many wealthy society women devoting so much of their time to their less fortunate neighbors. There is one Boston woman in particular who has done a great deal in this line, who has very laudable ideals and who, perhaps, is more popular among the young people she is assisting than any other. The story of her Summer camp for girls, following the exclusive story printed in the AMERICAN last Sunday about Miss Helen Frick's camp for True Blue Girls, is one of the notable stories prepared for tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Speaking of Summer reminds us that Harvard Summer school is under way, and Sybil Warne has taken occasion to look up what is going on at the university across the river. She has found some amazing things over there which could never happen when the sure enough Harvard boys are in town. Incidentally there are more women than men at the Summer school, and what some of them are doing, what they think, and who they are makes a most interesting story.

Mr. Nick Young, the eminent dramatic critic, and Mr. Moynahan, the distinguished Colorado artist, took a trip to Revere Beach the other day and what they have to say about it and what Mr. Moynahan has drawn about some of the things he alleges he saw down there will go down in history. Between them they certainly do successfully lift the lid off the famous seaside resort's secrets. Their page of fun will prove one of the most interesting features of Sunday's AMERICAN.

Everybody in town—and a good many out of town for that matter—knows a lot about Sheriff John Quinn, but very few would ever suspect him of doing what the AMERICAN'S camera man caught him up to the other day. Incidentally, when the picture and story is read at City Hall, there is bound to be considerable jealousy expressed. The sheriff is treading on dangerous ground. See Sunday's AMERICAN.

Frederick Johns, the AMERICAN'S music critic, is cutting a wide swath over in Europe. The other day, he says, someone called his attention to woman's styles—just as if he needed anyone to call his attention in that direction—and what he saw made his hair stand up right on end. What he has to say about the things the ladies are wearing in Paris is certainly startling enough to worry most any man. Mr. Johns was so alarmed, and wishing to warn his friends in Boston, engaged Monsieur Stevens, distinguished French artist, to draw him pictures of the latest innovations in French styles, and the story and pictures will be one of the most fascinating features of tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Down in Mattapoisett there is a pretty kettle of fish. Suffragism is the cause of the disturbance, and the fashionable women of the Summer colony, not to mention the year-round residents, are in a state of great excitement. Rival camps, the Antis and the Pros, are preparing for a vigorous campaign, with meetings and speeches and all that. It all started because a Boston woman wanted to hold a meeting to advance the cause of woman's suffrage. The story in detail will be told in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Of course you have seen the ads in the AMERICAN during the week mentioning the Lady with the Green Parasol, who will be at Revere Beach tomorrow and who will have $100 for the first person who identifies her. The complete details of how to go about getting that $100 will be told in Sunday's AMERICAN. It's a pretty easy way to get a round hundred, and, incidentally, even if you don't find the girl, you'll have a day's outing by the sea that can't help but do you a world of good. Take the kiddies along, let them go in the water and play in the sand, while you take a look around for the Lady with the $100 to give away.

Turning to the Contest Department, we find that the winners in the great Prize Beauty Princess contest are announced. If you were entered in the contest, or if you assisted any of the contestants, you'll be interested to know who is New England's Princess, and who have won the other prizes in the great popular contest.

There is a special feature for people living in Provincetown, Chatham, Hyannis, Barnstable, Onset, Mattapoisett, Fairhaven, Buzzards Bay and other places down that way. A sheet of picture post cards, local views, will be given away as a special supplement in these towns only.

No editorial concerning the Sunday AMERICAN is complete without the warning—"Order your paper today so your newsdealer can be sure to have enough to go round."
